THE GENEALOGIST

EDITED BY
GEORGE W. MARSHALL, LL.D.,
FELLOW OF THE SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.

VOLUME IV.

LONDON:
GEORGE BELL AND SONS,
YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN.

P R E F A C E .

In bringing to a close the fourth volume of the Genealogist, it is my pleasant duty to tender my thanks to the subscribers and contributors whose aid and kindness has enabled me to add another stepping-stone towards that opposite bank of the genealogical river on which we all hope to find the goal of our ambition,—the missing link. If I have been the means of helping any student of family history on his way thither, my labour has brought its proper and its own reward.

It will be noticed that for the first time I have completed a volume within the year, and I trust that in future each succeeding year may add another to those already published. The advantage of this plan is obvious, for as each volume must be crowned by an index, and my quarterly numbers are useless for general reference till they have one, the oftener I can so render them complete, the greater use they will be to the public, and I doubt not the more generally appreciated.

The Genealogist.

SIR JAMES WILFORD, Kt.

By THE EDITOR.

Sir James Wilford, whose portrait I am by the kindness of its present possessor, the Revd. Ambrose Win. Hall, enabled to give in this volume of the 'Genealogist,' was one of those brave old knights of the Tudor period who, in their day, did good service to their country, but of whose deeds, now that their "swords are rust" and "bones are dust," no record is to be found in the works of our historians or biographers. A few scattered notices are all that I can find, but, scanty as they are, they are not without interest.

The picture, which is here represented by the Autotype Company's process, is in oil, dated 1547, painted on panel, and represents Sir James holding in his right hand a general's bâton. The year of his age at the date of its execution is given above the arms as 32. In the right hand corner is a rude picture of the town of Haddington, of which he was Commander during its memorable siege, with this inscription:—

Taken and defended against tow beseges of the Scotcs assisted of the Frenehe bie the valoure of the Englishe men this knight being theyre Captayne.

And in the left his arms and crest:—

Quarterly.—1 and 4, Gules, a chevron engrailed between three leopards' faces Or.—WILFORD. 2 and 3, Argent, a chevron Gules between three horns Sable.—CORNENS.

CREST.—A lion rampant Vert.

The size of the panel is 36 in. high by 27 wide. It originally formed part of the collection of Richard Gough, the antiquary, but there is no evidence to show whence he obtained it, nor was he, so far as is known, related to or connected with Sir James. A similar picture, but inferior to this, was bequeathed by Sir Thomas Apreece to St. George's Hospital, and now hangs there among other portraits in the Council-room. Some account of the way in which it came into the hands of the Apreece family will be found in 'Notes and Queries,' 4th series, ii, pp. 402, 477.

The Wilfords, or Wilsfords, as the name is frequently spelt, appear to have acquired their wealth as London merchants in the time of Henry the Seventh, and descended from William

Wilsford, described in Berry's 'Kent Genealogies,' p. 134, as of an ancient family near Wilsford in Devon. The name occurs as Willesford, of Tavistock, in the 1620 Visitation of Devon (Harleian Society, vi, 304), but I am unable to say where Wilsford in Devon is. There are two parishes of the name in Wiltshire. William Wilsford married Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Walter Cornens (sic in Berry, but quere Cornew, the n being an error for u), son and heir of Sir Walter Cornens, knight, by whom he had Robert, son and heir, who was father of Edmund Wilford, S.T.P., Provost of Oriel College, Oxford, died 1507; Peter Wilford, citizen of London; and James Wilford, Alderman, and Sheriff of London in 1499. Stow (edn. Strype, book ii, p. 121), in his account of the monuments at St. Bartholemew Exchange, says:—"James Wilford, 'Taylor' (i.e. Merchant Taylor), one of the Sheriffes 1499, appointed by his Testament, a Doctor of Divinity, every Good Friday for ever, to preach there a sermon of Christ's Passion, from sixe of the Clocke till eight before Noone, in the said Church." By Elizabeth, daughter of John Betenham of Pluckley, Esq., he was father of Thomas Wilford, eldest son, John, William, Robert, and Nicholas. John made his will 4th February, 1550, as "John Wylford the elder Citizen and Merchant Tailor of the Citie of London and late Alderman of the same Citie." Wills "to be buried in St. Bartholemew the Less where my father and mother lieth buried." Mentions sons James, John, and Thomas. Now wife Mary. James Wylford my father. Daughters Anne W., and Grace W. Sister Katherine Gaynsforth. Brothers Thomas Wilsford, William W., and Nicholas W. In his will of lands, he gives his capital messuage in the parish of Mycham, co. Surrey, to his eldest son James, who is appointed executor. He proved 23rd March, 1550, in P.C.C. (Bucke, 9)

William is described in his will, dated 14th May, 1550, as "the elder." To be buried in St. Margaret, Lothbury. Son John executor. He proved in P.C.C., 11th November, 1551 (Bucke, 32).

Robert was citizen and Merchant Taylor of London. His will mentions his wife Joan.¹ Son William. Brothers Thomas, John, alderman of London, Nicholas, and William W. Sisters Gaynsford and Read. His wife Joan and brother William executors. His will of lands, dated 18th September, 1545, at Gosfield in Essex, mentions the manor of Byggin in the parish of Mitcham, co. Surrey. Proved by both executors 23rd October, 1545, in P.C.C. (Pymminge, 39)

*Nicholas*² is described in his will, dated 3rd August, 1551, as "Nicholas Wylsford citizen and Merchant Taylor of London." Desires to be buried in St. George, Botolph Lane, as nigh to the body of Thomas Gale as conveniently may be. Mentions daughter Elizabeth wife of John Kyddermyster. Son Thomas W. Brother William W. Cosyn John W. the elder. John W. the younger and Thomas W. sons of my brother John, W. deceased. The children of brother Robert W. deceased. Appoints his wife Elizabeth executrix; she proved in P.C.C. 24th August, 1551 (Bucke, 23).

Thomas Wilford, the eldest son was of Hartridge in the parish of Cranbrooke, co. Kent, which estate he acquired by purchase. (Hasted's 'Kent,' vol. iii, p. 48). He was twice married, 1st to Elizabeth, daughter of Walter Colepeper of Bedgebery, Esq., 2ndly to Rose, daughter of William Whetenhall of Peckham. His eldest son by his first wife was Sir James Wilford, the subject of this notice; his second, Francis Wilford, of Nonington. They had also eight daughters, all married. By his second wife he had Sir Thomas Wilford, of Heding in the parish of Kingston, knight, who married Mary, daughter and heir of Edward Poynings, from whom descended a numerous family. Hasted gives an amusing account of his grandson Edward, a soldier, parson, and Doctor of Divinity (Hasted's 'Kent,' iii, 750). His great-grandson, Sir James, was knighted at Whitehall 28th April, 1661 (Le Neve's Knights, p. 138, and Society of Antiquaries' MS., No. 163). Sir Thomas had one sister, who married Edwin Sandys, Archbishop of York. From her monument we learn that Sir Thomas, like his brother Sir James, was a "worthie souldier." (Morant's 'Essex,' 2nd edn., vol. ii, p. 34). Much more of the Wilford pedigree will be found by referring to the Visitations of Essex, published by the Harleian Society, pp. 18, 127, 523.

SIR JAMES WILFORD, if the age given on the portrait is correct, was born in the year 1516. As his death took place in November, 1550, he must have died at the early age of 34.

The battle of Pinkie was fought 10th September, 1547. In the following April (1548) Lord Grey of Wilton, to whom Somerset the Protector had entrusted the lieutenancy of the North, entered Scotland, and strongly fortified Haddington, leaving in it a garrison of 2000 foot and 500 horse, under Wilford, who had been recommended to Somerset as leader by Grey.¹ The following account of the siege of Haddington, which was terminated by its evacuation in October, 1549, will be found in the 'Archæologia Scotica,' vol. i, pp. 57-60:—

"The Scots were at that time [the occupation of the town in April, 1548] so depressed and dispirited, that the garrison of Haddington ravaged the whole country, and made excursions to the very gates of Edinburgh, without the smallest opposition. The Queen Mother, and Arran the Regent, applied to Henry II of France for assistance. He sent over an army.....

After frequent consultations, it was resolved to open the campaign with the siege of Haddington. The scheme was put in execution, but Wilford the governour, who was the life and soul of the garrison, made a most gallant defence, and Sir Thomas Palmer, and Halcroft, from Berwick forced their way, and relieved the town with a supply of men, provisions, and ammunition." The siege was carried on under the command of Dessé, the French general, who unsuccessfully attempted to take the town by a coup de main. He was succeeded in his command by the Chevalier Thermes, who brought over a reinforcement of 100 cuirassiers, 200 horse, and 1000 foot. His first action was to build a fort at Aberlady, which prevented the garrison receiving supplies by sea. "The garrison being reduced to great extremity for want of provisions, and being informed of a supply having arrived at Dunbar, the governour marched out with a strong detachment, to endeavour, if possible, to convey it to Haddington; but, being attacked by a large body of French troops, and overpowered by numbers, the gallant Wilford, after an obstinate resistance, was taken prisoner, and the greatest part of the detachment cut to pieces. As the Chevalier seemed determined, at all events, to get Haddington into his possession, which the English found impracticable to preserve, not only on account of its distant and inland situation, but because of the plague which had broken out in the garrison and swept away numbers; the Earl of Rutland determined that neither soldiers nor military stores should fall into the hands of the enemy. He therefore marched into Scotland with 6000 men, and, entering Haddington in the night, he safely conducted all the soldiers and artillery to Berwick, October 1, 1549."

I find no confirmation of the assertion that Sir James Wilford was taken prisoner. Robert Birrel, in his Diary, printed in 'Fragments of Scottish History' (Edinburgh, 1798, 4°), mentions one reverse sustained by the garrison, but says nothing of Wilford being taken prisoner. "The 17 day of Julay, a feild called Twesdayes chaisse, in anno 1548." "The seige of Haddingtoun was layed too by the Frenchmen, quhilk indurit ane haill zeir. In the quhilk tyme wes y^e Twesdayes chaisse, quher money of England wer takin and slaine." Wilford was at Haddington on the 22nd and 23rd July, and was knighted by the Protector on the 28th of September.¹ On the 1st of November he wrote to Somerset, reporting the bad state of the garrison, and again on the 11th, recommending Mr. Asheton to supply his place on his repair to the Court.² He was in Haddington as late as November 25th, on which day William Darke, "Auncient berar to Sr Jamys Wyllford, Knight, Captaine gen'rall of the Kings Ma^{ties} towne of Haddlyngton," made an affidavit before him at Haddington concerning the will of one John Pynder, which is registered in P.C.C. (Populwell, 33) After this we hear no more of him, either in connection with Haddington, or in any other way, till May the 20th, 1550, at which date Edward the Sixth granted him "the office of Bailiff of his park at Oxford for life, which office and premisses were granted December 20, 4 Edward VI, on the death of Sir James Wilford to Sir George Broke, Lord Cobham."

Sir James Wilford was of Hartridge, in the parish of Cranbrooke, co. Kent. He married Joyce, daughter of John Barrett, by whom he had Thomas, his son and heir. His son James married Anne, daughter and sole heir of Thomas Newman, by Anne, daughter of Rooke Green, who brought the estate of Quendon, co. Essex, to her husband. Here the Wilfords subsequently resided.² Sir James died in November, 1550, and was buried in the Church of St. Bartholemew Exchange (Visitation of Essex, 1612, and Strype's Stow, book ii, 121). His wife survived till 1580, and was buried there 15th September in that year, as "Lady Joyce Wilford, widow."

His will, of which I add a note, is dated 18th November, and was proved in P.C.C. by his relict 26th November, 1550 (Coode, 28).

THE MARSHALLS OF EXETER.

During the seventeenth century a respectable family of this name flourished in the city of Exeter, two of whom, John and James, father and son, were Mayors, the former in 1615, and the latter in 1658.¹ In investigating the history of other persons of the same name I have come across several wills and evidences, from which the following pedigree is compiled. It may be of some interest to local historians, as no complete genealogy of this family has been published. The only notice of it in any printed work is a brief pedigree, which appears to have been compiled between 1627 and 1635, in Westcote's Devonshire Families, edited by Geo. Oliver and Pitman Jones, p. 502. It is probable that this family was connected with the Marshalls of Teigngrace, under which place Westcote says (p. 439), "Here also is a tribe of the Marshalls." At p. 502 he gives their arms as, Or, a mitrind sable, with this entry, "John Marshall, one of the four coroners of Devon, married Agnes daughter of Walter Ossingold of East Oggwell, and had issue Thomas, John, and Katherine." The arms, however, recorded to them in the Visitation of Devon, 1572 (Coll. of Arms, MS. G 19, fo. 22^b), are Or, a mitrind sable, on a chief gules three antelopes' heads Or.² Westcote attributes this coat to the Marshalls of Exeter.

The first of the name mentioned by Westcote is William Marshall, who had issue Robert Marshall, who married Joan, daughter and heir of Owsley of Chillington, co. Somerset. His will, dated 7 August 1576, was proved by her 9 October following, in the P. C. C. (Carew 29.) He is described as of Ashewill, in the parish of Ilminster, and desires to be buried in the churchyard of Ilminster. Gives to son Edward Marshall "his Rynes and bark and half my Tanne vates with a mill to grind Bark." From this bequest it seems that he was by trade a tanner. Mentions sons, John, Nicholas, William, John 'the younger,' and Thomas, all under age; and appoints wife Joan sole executrix and residuary legatee. He appears to have had two other children beside these mentioned in his will, Roger and Anne, who may possibly have been twins, born posthumous. I take them, therefore, according to the presumable order of their births:—

1. Edward Marshall, mentioned in the will of his sister Anne, 1616, as then deceased; had a son Nicholus.
2. John Marshall.

² For this reference I am indebted to John de Havilland, Esq., York Herald.

3. Nicholas Marshall, of Ilminster, co. Somerset, shoemaker. Will dated 10 November, 1625. To be buried in the churchyard of Ilminster. Lands at Coxbridge to son John Marshall.¹ Wife Christian, sole executrix. Son William Marshall. Daughter Agnes Marshall. Daughter Jone, wife of John Ashton. Brothers-in-law Richard Chicke, Robert Webb, and John Chicke overseers. Son Nicholas Marshall under age. Proved by relict in P. C. C. 18 Feby. 1625-6. (Hele 21.) He had also a son Thomas Marshall, who proved the will of his aunt Anne Marshall, 1616.
4. William Marshall, of Dinnington, in the diocese of Bath and Wells, co. Somerset. Will dated 1 Decr. 1623. Gives money to poor of Ilminster. Mentions, brother Nicholas Marshall,—four children of son-in-law John Braggs,—Elizabeth, Susanna, James, John, and Richard, children of my brother John Marshall of Exeter, all under age,—my brother Roger's children, that is his son John, daughter Jane, and daughter Mary, all under age,—Edward the son of my brother Thomas, and Joane and Judeth (under age) his daughters,—Anne, Elizabeth, Margaret, Joane, and Phillip, the daughters of my cozen John Marshall, all under age,—Mary Geare myne apprentice,—John Reynolds my man,—Stenchlic Bennet,—Julian Stuechie my god daughter,—to my brother Thomas my chattell lease of Chippelcome and Longhills in the parish of Winsham, co. Somerset,—Nicholas son of said Thomas,—gives legacy to said brother Thomas on condition that he makes over his land in West and Middle Chinnoek to his (the said Thomas's) son Robert "on his retorne home,"—John son of my brother Thomas,—William Marshall my brother Thomas his son to be executor,—he proved the will in P. C. C. 5 March 1623. (Byrde, 28.) Administration was granted 4 April 1624, to Thomas Marshall, brother of the testator, because William Marshall, the executor, was dead.
5. John Marshall, called the younger in his father's will, Mayor of Exeter, in 1615, of whom presently.

¹ I take this John to be the John mentioned in the will of William Marshall, 1623, as his cousin (cousin at this date usually means nephew), who had five daughters, Anne, Elizabeth, Margaret, Joane, and Phillip, all under age. There were four other John's, as will be seen from the pedigree, who stood in the relation of nephew to this testator, all of whom, so far as can be ascertained, died without issue, or had no issue in the year 1623. His father Nicholas is described in his will as of Ilminster; it is probable that the son also resided at that place. These considerations, coupled with the name of his youngest daughter, viz. Phillip, lead me to the conclusion that he is identical with "John Marshall of Ilminster, co. Somerset, yeoman. Will noncupative, dated 13 April 1625. He gave all he had to Elizabeth his wife, in the hearing of Katherine Goodland, the wife of Chm. Gopher Goodland, and of his (testator's) daughter Phillip Marshall. Administration to relict 26 May 1635." This will is registered in P. C. C. (Sadler 45).

6. Thomas Marshall, of Chillington, tanner, devisee of Chippecombe and Longhills, in the will of his brother William. Will dated 22 August 1641. Gives house at Chillington to his daughter Agnes Stuckie for life, with remainder to her son Thomas Stuckie,—her other children John, Judith, and Nicholas are all mentioned as under age,—my daughter Joane Weekes, her four children Anne, Marshall, Rebecca, and William, all under age,—to my wife Judith Marshall my now dwelling house, etc., in Chillington.—whereas I am to pay unto my son Edward Marshall £100 given to him by his uncle William Marshall deceased, and also £100 which was given him by his brother William Marshall deceased, etc.—appoints cozens Richard Knight, Thomas Marshall, and Robert Marshall, executors. The will was proved by all three in P. C. C. 30 September 1641. (Evelyn, 113.) This testator probably reached an advanced age, as several of his children predeceased him. It will be noticed that, like his father, he had two sons named John. His issue was:—

- i. William Marshall, of Chillington, will nuncupative and undated,—William Stuckey son of William Stuckey,—to all my brothers and sisters £100 apiece,—money to poor of Dinnington and Ilminster,—my father Thomas Marshall executor. He proved the will in P. C. C. 10 April 1624. (Byrde, 36.)
- ii. John Marshall, of Exeter, made his will nuncupative, 24 May 1622, in which he is described as the younger. The term younger is no doubt used to distinguish him from his uncle John Marshall (Mayor and Alderman) of Exeter, and not from his brother John, who was citizen and fishmonger of London. He bequeathed to each of the children of his uncle John Marshall, Alderman of Exeter, £50; to Grace Challis, £10; to the poor of Chillington, £10; and a like sum to the poor of St. Mary Arches; to his cousin John Marshall, £100; to Mary Wall, £10; residue to his brother Robert Marshall, and appoints him executor. Administration to John Marshall the uncle, 5 July 1623, because Robert Marshall the executor renounced. Administration 3 March 1628, to Alice Marshall, widow and executrix of John Marshall, senr., deceased, while he lived, administrator of the goods of John Marshall the younger. Administration 17 June 1631, to James Marshall of the city of Exeter, merchant, because the said

Alice was dead. (Swan, 72.) This James was eldest son of the alderman.

- iii. Nicholas Marshall, "of Chillington, co. Somerset, tanner, one of the sons of Thomas Marshall of Chillington aforesaid." Will dated 14 January 1627. Gives to his brother John Marshall, citizen and fishmonger, of London, a messuage called Puphills and other lands at West Chinnoek, Middle Chinnoek, and Puphill, co. Somerset, and lease of Longhill and Chippeleombe, in the parish of Winsham, and appoints him executor. He proved in P. C. C. 27 Octr. 1628. (Barrington, 92.)
- iv. Robert Marshall.
- v. Edward Marshall.
- vi. John Marshall of St. Mary le Bowe, citizen and fishmonger, of London. Will dated 1 October 1630. Appoints wife Anne Marshall sole executrix. Mentions the four children of my sister Anne Stuckey of Chillington, co. Somerset, all under age,—Jeremie Lecche, parson of St. Mary le Bowe, where I now dwell,—my servant Susan Langworthe,—my father in law John Lynne and Mr. William Spurstowe overseers,—wife "now going with child." Proved in P. C. C. by relict 12 October, 1630. (Scroope 83.)

John Lynne was of Exeter, and entered his pedigree in the Visitation of Devon, 1620. See Harleian Society, vol. vi, p. 176; and Genealogist, vol. i, p. 348.

- i. Joane married Weekes, and had issue.
 - ii. Judeth, living in 1623.
 - iii. Agnes, married William (?) Stuckey of Chillington, and had issue. She is called Anne in the will of her brother John above.
7. Roger Marshall of Aishwell, in the parish of Ilminster, clothier. Will nuncupative, dated 10 April 1635. Mentions daughters Marie and Joane,—Joane to be executrix. Witnesses, Thomas Marshall and William Marshall. Proved in P. C. C. by said Joane Marshall 10 June 1635. (Sadler 69.)

Besides the above daughters he had a son John Marshall, who is mentioned in the will of William Marshall, 1623, as then under age. He probably died in his father's lifetime.

1. Ann. Her will, as of the parish of Ilminster, co. Somerset, spinster, is dated 12 December 1616, and was proved in P. C. C. 14 February 1616-17 by the executor therein named. (Weldon 14.) She wills to be buried in the churchyard of Ilminster. Mentions brother Roger Marshall and his three children,—Nicholas Marshall, my godson, the son of my brother Edward Marshall, deceased,—Edward Marshall, the son of my brother Thomas Marshall of Chillington,—Jane Ayshton, the daughter of my brother Nicholas Marshall,—my kinsman Thomas Marshall, son of my brother Nicholas Marshall, sole executor and residuary legatee. Christian Marshall is one of the witnesses.

John Marshall, the Alderman, and Mayor of Exeter, probably settled in that city early in life. He married at St. Mary at Arches, 30 August 1595,¹ Alice, daughter of Richard Beavis² (or Bevis) of Exeter. I have the following notes of his will, and that of his wife:—

“John Marshall, Esq., one of the Aldermen of the city of Exeter. Dated 8 August, 1624. To be buried in St. Mary Archers church. Property to be divided into three equal parts according to the custom of the city of Exeter. First portion to wife, one other portion amongst my two daughters and three sons, vizt., James Marshall, John Marshall, Richard Marshall, Elizabeth Marshall, and Susan Marshall. The other third in the following legacies. To son James Marshall so much as shall with the legacy given him by his cousin John Marshall deceased make up his portion to £300. The like sum to sons John and Richard. The same to make daughter Elizabeth's portion up to £400, and the same to make daughter Susan's up to £350. All these children under age. To my daughter Alice Harris my second best ‘guilte bowle.’ To my daughter Jane third best gilt bowl. Thomas Milford, Elott Groot, Agnes Groote, and Mary Wall. Lands in parish of Northtowne called Eastercombe, Westercombe, and Luckerdon. Brother in law Peter Bevis, Esqre. Estate ‘of and in the sheafe and Rectory’ of Bampton, co. Devon. Proved by Alice Marshall the relict and executrix in P. C. C. 17 September 1624.” (Byrde, 74.)

“Alice Marshall, of the city of Exeter, widow. Dated 30 December, 1630. To my son and heir apparent James Marshall the manor of Dacombe, in the parish of St. Mary Church, co. Devon. My brother Richard Bevis. My daughter Elizabeth Trowbridge. My daughter Alice Harris. My daughter Jane Golde, [i.e. Gould]. My daughter Susanna Marshall, under age. Legacies bequeathed to said Susanna by her cousin John Marshall, and her brother John Marshall. Son Richard Marshall, under age, and legacy left to him by his cousin John Marshall, and

(St. John, 23.) Alice Marshall died 7 Jan. 1630. M.I.

John and Alice Marshall had the following children:—

1. John, bapt. 17 June 1599; buried 20 March 1600.
2. James, bapt. 22 January 1608; of whom presently.
3. John, of the City of Exeter, bapt. 19 July 1610; buried 16 December 1630. Administration granted by the Archdeaconry Court of Exeter to Alice Marshall his mother and James Marshall, merchant, 18 Dec. 1630. Bond is entered by which Alice Marshall, widow, James Marshall, merchant, Peter Bevis, Esq., and Dudley Copplestone of the City of Exeter, merchant, are bound to Thomas Barrett, clerk, and Wm. Kiste, in £1000.
4. Richard, bapt. 15 March 1612.
5. Richard, bapt. 3 Nov. 1613; buried 9 June, 1635.
1. Jane, bapt. 29 June 1598; buried 30 May 1600.
2. Alice, bapt. 29 June 1600; married, 29 June 1621, George Harris, who was born at Barnstaple, and had issue.
3. Grace, bapt. 6 May 1602; buried 11 January 1620.
4. Elizabeth, bapt. 24 March 1602-3; married, 26 March 1627, Thomas Trowbridge of Taunton, and had issue.
5. Jane, bapt. 18 March 1603-4; married, 26 September 1624, James Gould² of Exeter. (See Prince's Worthies of Devon, new edition, London, 1810, 4to., p. 436; and Visitation of Devon, Harl. Soc., vol. vi, p. 132.)
6. Susanna, married, 30 June 1635, Richard Lant.
7. Anne, bapt. 26 March 1607; buried 14 Nov'r. 1607.

James Marshall, second, but eldest surviving son, was Mayor of Exeter in 1658. Married, 29 May 1632, Susanna, daughter of Tylour. He was buried 26 January 1664. The register describes him as some-time Mayor. His monumental inscription is still extant, "Here lyeth the Body of [Jane]s Marshall, Marchent, Mayor of this City, who departed this life y^e

² There was at a later date another match between a Marshall and one of the Exeter Goulds. Sarah, born in 1627, daughter of George Gould of Exeter, by Elizabeth his wife, married Marshall of Exeter. George Gould was of the city of Exeter, mercer; will dated 22 Oct. 1694, and codicil 16 June 1702. Proved in P. C. C. 7 August 1702 (Herne, 131). In the codicil there is a bequest of 10s. to "the nurse of my daughter Sarah deceased," but no other mention of her is made.

20 (?) Jan. 1664." Administration of his effects was granted by the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 11 February 1664-5, to Susanna his relict. They had issue:—

1. John Marshall, bapt. 16 April, 1635.
2. James Marshall, bapt. 26 Nov. 1637. Administration granted by P.C.C., in which he is described as "James Marshall senior of the City of Exeter, but at Guinncy in parts beyond sea deceased," to John Marshall his brother, 10 May, 1677, James Marshall his son having renounced. Administration de bonis non to James Marshall the son 16 Octr. 1694.
3. Richard, bapt. 12 April, 1640.
4. Samuel, bapt. 9 July 1648.¹
5. Joseph, bapt. 31 March 1650.
1. Elizabeth, bapt. 29 May 1642; buried 13 October following.
2. Sarah, buried 20 July 1656.

From this time I have lost all trace of this family. There were other persons of the same name at Exeter early in the eighteenth century, children of the Rev. William Marshall, rector of Ashprington, co. Devon, but they descended out of Cornwall, and though possibly related to this family there is at present no evidence by which to connect them with it.

The persons mentioned in the following extracts from the register of burials at St. Mary Arches were no doubt connected, but I am unable to say how. "1678. April 8. Mrs. Sarah Marshall." "1697. Dec. 5. Mrs. Ann Marshall."

The earliest entry of the name, and the only one I have which has not been already mentioned, in the register of St. Mary Arches, is the marriage of "Thomas Marshall and Eleanor Trubodye," which took place 16 January, 1544. The only other Eleanor Marshall I have met with belonging to Exeter made her will 4 October, 1607, as of Crediton, in the co. of Devon, widow. She mentions her daughters Agnes Coleman, Grace Woode, and Mary Dennys and her children Thomas Dennys and Ellinor. Thomas Dennys my son in law. Appoints John Tuckfield of Crediton, gent., and Nicholas Ware of the same parish, yeoman, executors. Both proved the will 7 May, 1608, in P.C.C. (Windebank, 44).

THE BARONY OF WILLOUGHBY OF PARHAM.
IS IT EXTINCT ?

On the 16th February, 1547 (1st Edward VI), Sir William Willoughby of Parham, co. Suffolk, the representative of the ancient family of Willoughby of Willoughby, was raised to the peerage by letters patent under the title of Baron Willoughby of Parham, with the usual remainder to the heirs male of his body. In this dignity he was succeeded by his only son Charles, second baron, who by his wife the Lady Margaret Clinton, third daughter of Edward first Earl of Lincoln, had (with other issue who died s.p.) three sons, viz. 1. William, his heir, who died in his father's lifetime, leaving issue; 2. Ambrose; 3. Thomas.

Upon the decease of Charles, second Lord Willoughby of Parham in 1603, the peerage descended to his grandson William, third baron (eldest son of the Hon. William Willoughby, who died vita patris), and in his descendants the dignity continued until Charles, tenth baron, who died 9th December, 1679, without issue, devising his estate to his niece Elizabeth, the wife of the Hon. James Bertie, ancestor of the present Earl of Abingdon. With the tenth lord the whole of the male descendants of the Hon. William Willoughby, eldest son of Charles second baron, failed.

The barony should now by right have devolved upon the heir of Sir Ambrose Willoughby, the second son of the second lord. Sir Ambrose married Susan, daughter of Richard Brookes of Matson, co. Gloucester, Esq., and by her had an only son Edward Willoughby, who by his wife Rebecca, daughter of Henry Draper, Esq., left two sons, Henry and Richard. The elder of these should have inherited at the decease of the tenth lord; but having, with his family, emigrated to Virginia, his existence was lost sight of, and as no claim to the title was put forth by this branch of the family, it was presumed that the descendants of Sir Ambrose Willoughby had become extinct.

Under these circumstances Thomas Willoughby, son and heir of Sir Thomas, the third surviving son of the second baron, asserted his claim to the dignity, and meeting with no opposition the claim was allowed. On the 19th May, 1685, Thomas Willoughby was summoned to Parliament by writ addressed "Thomæ Willoughby de Parham Chlr." (Dugdale 'Summonses to Parl.') and took his seat in the House of Peers accordingly, ostensibly as eleventh baron under the patent of 1547. In his line the dignity continued for eighty years, until on the decease of Hugh, fifteenth baron, 21st January, 1765, without issue, the entire male descent of the eleventh baron, and of his father the Hon. Sir Thomas Willoughby, terminated,

In the meantime the descendant of Sir Ambrose Willoughby becoming acquainted with his right to the peerage, came back from America, proved his pedigree, and asserted his claim, creating thus, says Sir Bernard Burke ('Extinct Peerage,' ed. 1866) a condition of things most unprecedented in the annals of the peerage. "He, the true lord, was excluded from his true rights as a peer, while his cousin, the false lord, sat and voted."

This extraordinary state of things was, however, ended by the death of Hugh, fifteenth baron, in 1765. Henry Willoughby, the grandson and heir of Henry Willoughby who had emigrated to America, then put in his claim to the peerage. After a solemn hearing before the House of Lords, the title was adjudged to him in 1767 by the following memorable decision. "That he had a right to the title, dignity, and peerage of Willoughby of Parham, which was enjoyed from the year 1680 to 1765 by the male line (now extinct) of Sir Thomas Willoughby, youngest son of Charles Lord Willoughby of Parham, who were successively summoned to Parliament by descent, in virtue of letters patent bearing date 16th February, in the first year of the reign of Edward VI, and sat as heirs male of the body of Sir William, created lord Willoughby of Parham, by the said letters patent, contrary to the right and truth of the case; it now appearing that Sir Ambrose Willoughby, the second son of the said Charles (and elder brother of the said Thomas), who was averred to have died without issue, left a son; and that Henry Willoughby, Esquire, the claimant, is great grandson and heir male of the body of such son, and consequently heir male of the said Sir William, who was created lord Willoughby of Parham, the male line of the eldest son of Charles lord Willoughby of Parham, having failed in or before the year 1680." ('Dormant and Extinct Baronage,' by T. C. Banks, ed. 1809, vol. iii, 747). In accordance with this decision, on the 25th April, 1767, Mr. Henry Willoughby took his seat in the House of Peers as sixteenth baron. He died in 1775 without issue, and was succeeded by his brother George, seventeenth baron, at whose decease in 1779, also without issue, the whole of the male descendants of William first baron appear to have failed, and the barony created by letters patent in 1547 consequently became extinct.

The decision of the House of Peers in 1767, so far from ending all perplexity connected with the title of Willoughby of Parham, opens up an important question as to the after descent of the dignity. The singular mistake by which the younger line was allowed the title upon the presumption that the issue male of the elder branch had failed, together with the legal admission of the error in the judgment of 1767, casts considerable doubt upon the extinction of the peerage, if indeed it does not clearly point to the contrary. In more than one instance it has been determined that wherever a Writ of Summons to Parliament is issued, under the presumption that a barony is vested in the person to whom the writ is addressed, "although it shall afterwards appear that no such Barony is vested in the person so summoned, yet such Writ of Summons, and a sitting under it creates a barony in fee to the individual who receives it, and to the heirs of his body." (Courthope's 'Historic Peerage,' Ed. 1857, p. xli). This doctrine was clearly established in 1736 in the claim to the Barony of Strange, and confirmed in the following year in the case of the Barony of Clifford. (See also 'Cruise on Dignities,' pp. 192-203). Now the judgment of the peers in 1767, by which the Barony of Willoughby was adjudged to the representative of the elder line, expressly declares that the preceding lords had, for nearly a century, been summoned to Parliament "contrary to the right and truth of the case." In point of fact, neither Thomas, called eleventh baron, nor his descendants, were ever in legal possession of the Barony of Willoughby, created by the Patent of 1547. They received Writs of Summons, and sat and voted in Parliament, but the peerage which was supposed to confer the authority for their so doing was not theirs, but properly belonged to, and during the whole of the period in question, was actually vested in the elder line, whose right remained, although the enjoyment of the same was postponed owing to the omission to claim at the time it first accrued.

The condition of things from 1685 to 1765 as to the Barony of Willoughby of Parham was this. The senior line of the family, in which the peerage of 1547 undoubtedly vested, was excluded the enjoyment of its peerage rights, while successive generations of a younger branch sat and voted in the House as Barons Willoughby of Parham. The latter were certainly Peers of Parliament, inasmuch as they received Writs of Summons, and enjoyed the rank and privileges of barons. But as certainly they were not in possession of the barony under which they were supposed to sit. The question then arises, what peerage did they hold? The decisions before referred to, in the cases of the Baronies of Strange and Clifford, seem to leave little room for doubt upon the point. Thomas Willoughby was summoned to Parliament in 1685 under the supposition that he had inherited the Barony of Willoughby of Parham, but which after circumstances proved was at that very time vested in another person. Under such writ he sat and voted in the House, as did his descendants after him. The law in such cases is clear. "If a commoner is summoned to Parliament, and sits under such summons, his blood is ennobled, and the title and dignity descend to his heirs." ('Cruise on Dignities,' p. 202.) Thomas Willoughby when summoned was undoubtedly a commoner, inasmuch as the peerage he was supposed to hold was the property of another.

Consequently the Writ of Summons to him must, it is assumed, be regarded as a creation de novo. Immediately upon his receiving the writ, and in obedience thereto sitting under it, he became entitled to a barony in fee, inheritable after the manner of all such baronies by his heirs general, both male and female. The circumstance that he was called Lord Willoughby of Parham, while at the same time another person was in existence entitled to the same designation, does not in any way militate against this view. It is quite within the province of the sovereign to summons to Parliament two persons by the same name and title, and many instances are on record where this has been done. Neither does the fact that Thomas Willoughby and his descendants were placed in the precedence of the barony of 1547 interfere with their title to the peerage. A mistake in the matter of precedence is a point that at any time can be rectified by the House. ('Cruise,' pp. 196, 197.)

To summarize the whole. Two distinct Baronies of Willoughby of Parham have, it may be assumed from the foregoing premises, been called into existence. The first by Letters Patent to Sir William Willoughby in 1547, and which in accordance with the terms of the patent became extinct upon the failure of the issue male of the first lord in 1779. The second by Writ of Summons to Thomas Willoughby in 1685, which being a barony in fee is inheritable by his heirs-general. Hugh, called fifteenth Baron Willoughby, but who in reality was fifth baron under the Writ of 1685, was the last male descendant of this line. Upon his death in 1765 unmarried, the title fell into abeyance between his two sisters and co-heirs, and thus remains amongst their descendants and representatives to the present time.

If the foregoing assumption as to the existence of a barony in fee be correct, and it is submitted that there is strong reason for believing so, it becomes of importance to enquire as to the person or persons who would now be entitled to claim such barony. Upon this point the annexed Pedigrees, compiled chiefly from information supplied by members of the family, and giving the descendants of Thomas Willoughby who was summoned by Writ in 1685, will, I think, be of interest.¹

THE "SEGAR" ROLL OF ARMS AS AN ORDINARY.

EDITED BY JAMES GREENSTREET.

This Roll is edited by me from the copy in the Harleian Manuscript, No. 6137, where, in the fifth space on folio 61 of the manuscript, its description runs thus: "In rotulo antiquo hec Arma sequentia suis propriis coloribus depingebantur, et in membrana tempore Regis Edwardi primi. In custodia Willelmi Segar, quarterii principalis Regis Armorum, 1605." There is, however, another copy at the College of Arms, preserved in volume elxiv of the Heraldic Collections of Augustine Vincent, sometime Windsor Herald. It begins on folio 214 of that manuscript, and the title is as follows: "The trewe Coppie of Auntient rolle of Armes, well wrytten and painted, remaynyng in the handes of Mr. [left blank] Snalepece, of Norfolkke, 1592." The same laudable endeavour to preserve the peculiarities of the original which is noticeable in the Harleian 6137 versions of the "Camden" and "Guillim" Rolls is likewise to be observed in the copy from which I print, but the trickings of the coats in Vincent's version are more or less carelessly executed.

With respect to the date of the original roll from which both copies were derived, one very important and interesting feature is the occurrence in it of a coat of arms which either really belonged, or had been ascribed to the Emperor of Tartary. Now, some ten or fifteen years before the close of the reign of Edward I, much interest seems to have centred in the regions over which the conqueror of Tartary ruled.¹ For one Geoffrey de Langley was dispatched as Ambassador from England to his Court; and portions of the accounts relating to the daily disbursements made by Langley while upon the expedition are yet to be seen at the Public Record Office,² and furnish highly interesting particulars as to the prices of comestibles, clothing and other necessaries of life both on the Continent and in the East at that early period. Among other things, we learn the names and number of Langley's comrades and servants, hear of their ailments, and note the sustenance provided for ensuring the safe arrival in England of the wondrous "leopard" (i.e. lion) and elephant (peace offerings, perhaps, from the savage potentate to King Edward).

It appears that some part of the journey was accomplished by water, since a barge is mentioned in such a manner as leads us to infer that it was carried (? i.e. piecemeal) with the expedition. Much information, also, with regard to foreign money, and the exchanges at that date, may doubtless be derived from an examination of these valuable fragments.

In addition to this, if the contents of the identifications which I have made in the genealogical notes appended to this edition of the roll are duly weighed, they will not fail, I think, to convince the inquirer that the document was compiled in (or very near to) 1280;³ that is, about the same date as the "Camden" Roll, which I have already suggested as having been executed probably between the years 1278 and 1285; and, consequently, some twenty years before the compilation of "Guillim's" Roll, which appears to be in or about the year 1300, as has been previously observed.

Before concluding, I am anxious to acknowledge my obligations to Stephen Tucker, Esq., "Rouge Croix," for access to MSS. preserved at Heralds' College, reference to which was necessary in connection with the publication of this, the "Camden," and other Rolls of Arms.

BATHURST OF LECLADE. THE BARONETCY OF 1643, NOW EXTINCT.—According to Burke's 'Extinct and Dormant Baronetcies,' the dignity expired with the 6th Baronet, "Sir Laurence Bathurst, who resided at (sic) Georgia, and died there." The author adds: "The title is stated by some accounts to be extinct, but by other[s] to be vested in a gentleman still resident in America."

Mr. Courthope also states that the dignity became extinct on the decease of the 6th Baronet.

I am credibly informed that the title actually expired in manner following:—

“METHVEN OF THAT ILK, A DOUBTFUL PEDIGREE.”

Since the appearance in the ‘Herald and Genealogist,’ vol. vii, page 423, of the able critical article by Anglo-Scotus on the claim of the Wiltshire Methuens to descent from an old Scottish family, I have discovered in a manuscript volume in the Lyon office, a copy of the Birth brief or Certificate of descent issued in 1725 by Sir Alexander Erskine, Baronet, then Lord Lyon, to Sir Paul Methuen, K.B. It gives merely the names of his ancestors for three generations, stating that his father was son of Paul, son of Anthony Methven, who left Scotland and settled in England: no designation is given to either of these, and the names of their wives are not mentioned. This seems conclusive that the Lyon Court at that time did not sanction such a lineage as was later set forth, and probably no claims were then made to a remoter, or to any honourable descent; although the Birth brief alludes to several persons of the name, as having figured in Scotland, no suggestion is made to show that Sir Paul was descended from any of them.

The Chartulary of Cambus-kenneth recently printed reduces “Andrew de Methven of that Ilk” A.D. 1505, to the more modest position of Andrew Meffen an inhabitant of the burgh of Clackmaman. This volume also contains a Decree of the Lords of Council in 1528 against the parishioners of Kilmarnock for withholding from the Abbot and Convent their teind sheaves; among the recusants is David Meffane, occupier jointly with John Slewman of the lands of South Soume.

The misquotation of a Crown charter as evidence for the existence of “IX John Methven de eodem” is remarkable. It is said to be by James V., 24th April, 1537, in favour of Mr. Edward Bruce of lands about Clackmaman. There is printed in the Acts of Parliament of Scotland a ratification of a Charter of Novodamus of Charles II., 26th March, 1669, of the lands and Barony of Clackmaman, and other properties, to Sir Henry Bruce of Clackmaman; among the smaller pieces of land mentioned is Baxter’s Croft on the north side of the town of Clackmaman, bounded on the west by the lands of John Proud (called “John Rule” in the Baronage), and on the east by the lands of John Methven, who is there made John de Methven. The Charter goes on, after describing other lands, to convey “the Superioritie of the lands of the deceast ‘Gilbert Coustoun’ also lying north Andrew Methven.” This is bounded on the west by the lands of Clackmaman, and the quasi quotation is described as an annual rent from the lands of Gilbert Colston.

There can be no doubt that the Charter of 1669 has been found, altered, and antedated by above 130 years, to serve the purpose of the compiler of the Methven genealogy.

When the lineage of the Methvens was reprinted in 'Burke's Commoners,' 1833, it was stated, that the shield is borne on the breast of an eagle with two heads displayed sable, "granted as a mark of favour to the family by Albert I., Emperor of Germany, 1304, and renewed by letters patent by King George III. in 1775." The latter part of the statement is correct,

The grant by the Emperor does not appear to have been produced to the Lyon King of Arms in 1775, and there is no allusion to it, nor is the eagle given as a supporter to the shield in 'Douglas' Baronage.' From the Chartulary of Inchaffray Abbey and other reliable sources the following notes have been made.

Sir Robert de Methven, with consent of the Lady Solina his wife and their children, makes a donation of lands at Dalpatrick to the Abbey and Convent of Inchaffray, which was confirmed by Robert, Earl of Strathern, 1244-1270.

Philip.	Robert.

Randulph Metlifenne witnesses
a Charter, 1290-1308.

Sir Roger de Methven swore fealty to Edward I. in 1296, occurs previously as witness to a charter of Malise, Earl of Stratherne, makes a donation of his lands of Carnebo to Inchaffray Abbey; in 1319 is one of the assize on a perambulation of Marches at Kinross. He was probably father of another Sir Roger who died without issue soon after 1360, when his lands at Kellor reverted to Robert, Earl of Stratherne, who granted them in 1365 to Sir James de Douglas, Lord of Dalkeith.

In the charter and in one of confirmation by Euphemia, Countess of Moray and Strathern, it is explained that Kellor had been granted by Malise, Earl of Strathern, to his daughter (Solina above named ?), the grandmother of Sir Roger de Methven, who was the last of her descendants.

A Robert de Methven occurs, 1233-55, as chaplain and penitentiary of the Bishop of St. Andrews, but he took his name from his benefice; he is designed Robert parson of Methven, Robert vicar of Methven, Robert of Methven chaplain, &c.

1413. Alexander Methven, Bursar of St. Andrew's University.

1478. John Methven held lands in Old Lindores, Fife.

1483. Sir David Methven, chaplain, and Master of the Hospital and House of Our Lady.

1488. Patrick Methven in Hailes, near Edinburgh.

1530. Henry Methven, Bailie of St. Andrew's.

Ante 1585. Mr. Thomas Methven of Craigtoun, Fife.

1608. Mr. John Methven, of Barnfield.

Mr. William Methven, minister at Fogo and elsewhere in Berwickshire from 1585, resigned in 1626, and died eight years after leaving a family.

1643. Mr. David Methven, heir of his mother, Elizabeth Wood, in lands near St. Andrew's.

Mr. John Methven, of Craighton, who registered arms about 1673, similar to those borne in 1530 by the Bailie of St. Andrew's, left his property to his wife, Judith Greig, who before 1698 married Alexander Seatounne, formerly Bailie of St. Andrew's.

There was a Paul Methven, who graduated at St. Andrew's in 1661, and died Minister of Denino in Fifeshire, 1670-71.

FANSHAW FAMILY.—Le Neve in his Pedigrees of Knights (Harl. Soc. viii, 124-5), is clearly wanting in one generation of this family. Sir Thomas Fanshaw, the first of Jenkins (Surveyor-General and Clerk of the Crown to James I), died December 1630. He was not father, but grandfather, of Thomas Fanshaw, who according to Le Neve was living in 1699. There was an intermediate Thomas, also Clerk of the Crown, who married Susan, dan. and co-heir of Matthew Otten of Putney, Esq. (See Burke's Extinct Peerage.) It seems probable from the date of knighthood, that it was the latter, and not his son, who received that honour, December 10, 1660. I shall be obliged to any correspondent who can determine this point, and also for the dates of death of the last two Thomas Fanshaws.

MR. FOSTER'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE, 1880. (Nichols and Sons, Westminster).

Mr. Joseph Foster has raised himself to the Peerage. Known hitherto but as a mighty maker of manuscripts, and as a grappler with the genealogies of the gentle, to whom "a thousand years were but as one day," and a thousand circulars but as one day's post, he has been mercifully spared, through five long years, to achieve the magnum opus of his literary warfare, and has, at least, made his cross, if he has not written his name, on the Libro d'oro of the list of peerage compilers.

We confess to having looked for the completion of this work with special interest. It was first announced in a newspaper paragraph, which could only lead to the inference that it would be of a quasi-official character—the assistance of Sir Albert Woods (Garter) and Mr. Edward Bellasis (Bluemantle), with others, being pledged to the undertaking. The Chapter of the Heralds' College, through their Registrar, took occasion to reply to that paragraph, and to disclaim, as a body, any official cognizance of or sanction to the work—and the result proves the wisdom of that precaution. Mr. Foster tell us, in his preface, that Garter and Bluemantle have (without fee or reward) kept faith with him, and to a compilation so "heralded" and assisted, we had every reason to look for at least an approach to that proper arrangement and general accuracy, with which we cannot credit the book now before us. That it aims at the correction of many annually repeated errors, and supplies a mass of information (which it seems partial and impolitic on the part of official persons to lay open to any private interest), and that there is in it the groundwork of a book of reference of great value—there can be no doubt. Having said this, we have said all which can be truly advanced in its favor, for, apart from the general construction, there is scarcely a page on which the adverse critic could not find material for ridicule or reproach. We do not propose to enumerate the multitude of errors in dates and names, which are not only incidental to works of this kind, but, especially in a first edition, baffle the vigilance of even careful revising. We leave these unnoticed—Aquila non capit muscas—we shall find sufficient field for comment in such glaring faults as are as unpardonable as they are incomprehensible, when we remember the triune authority of the composition, and that these, let us say, "Foster Brothers" have all been nurtured from the one plentiful teat of the Heralds' College records. We attack them on their own ground and with their own weapons.

The historic name of Hampden (see "Buckinghamshire,") is mis-spelt. Lord Ranelagh made an Irish Representative Peer; Lord Ellenborough as succeeding his "father" in the peerage. The wife of Mr. Alfred Montgomery styled "Lady Fanny," and the family name of Lord de Blaquière prefixed with "de." The heraldry is in all cases either highly comic or eccentric. Nor does there appear to be any method in the madness. Counts of the Holy Roman Empire have sometimes the special cognizance (and wrongly) of that dignity, but these are for the greater part omitted altogether. A ducal coronet is given to the young Earl Russell. The badge of baronet is constantly added to the shield of a peer. Crests issuing from coronets are placed upon torces (ex. gr. "Haddington.") Banners, in many of which the 3rd and 4th quarters are omitted! are surmounted by crests. "Mottoes," (sic, sub "Nairne,") given to peeresses. Wrong blazons, and blazons not agreeing in any way with the woodcuts (see Earl of Lindsay's supporters, and query the authority) are frequent. And of these careful noters of "arms not exemplified" we may ask why exceptions are made in such cases as "De Ros"? If such compromises can be made as in "Sandhurst" and "Stradbroke," of placing the coronet over inherited coats, why should the unquestionable arms of Lords Conyers and Brayc be left out simply because they have not yet applied for supporters? Nor is this all. We pronounce Lady Nairne's arms to be all wrong. We question the sinister supporter of Lord Cadogan, and the correctness of the shield of "Carnwarth." We question also the right of Selwin-Ibbetson to his shield as arranged, and the propriety of the omission of "Conway" in the achievement of the Marquess of Hertford (whom Mr. Foster, in common with all others of that degree, calls "Marquis.") Lord Somers has authority for a quartered coat, to which he is all the more entitled since the royal license for his compound surname. And it appears like straining at a gnat indeed, after the easy eglutition of so many camels, to throw a doubt on the right to such arms as "Elliott," "Fairfax," and "Hawley." On what ground is "Chetwynd" contained in the shield of the premier earl? Has it ever been used, or been likely to be used, since the succession to the earldom of Shrewsbury? On what principle is this (and such a case too, as "Thompson" in Lord Wenlock's arms) retained, when "Craggs" is denied to and left out of Lord St. Germans'?—all three being cases of a precisely similar character. And gracious! Garter. Bless me! Bellasis. Fie! Mr. Foster, where on earth did either or all of you together find that panoply of heraldry for my Lord Sheffield?

We can forgive an author in these hard times doing anything in reason to make his work remunerative, but in angling for subscribers, and to flatter the vanity of those who like to figure "in the Peerage," it really seems derogatory to such a work, to reduce the account of the matchless genealogy of Courtenay to a minimum, in order to make room for pages of a regular shoal of outlying Smiths, the far distant kinsmen of my Lord Carrington, and not in any way in remainder to his title. The same remark applies to the equally glaring case of Peel. In the same way such baronets' pedigrees as a genealogist would revel in (ex. gr., Tichborne, Anderson, etc.) are "scamped," and replaced by the most extended review of collaterals in such utterly uninteresting and unknown families as Barlow and Hill, the issue of females being as carefully carried out by Mr. Foster as that of males, whether within the limitation or not. All this is very good and useful in its place, but that place is not "The Peerage," and if the system were a little enlarged, we might eventually meet with that interesting person, "The friend of the nephew of the cousin of the Duke of Wellington," whose portrait appeared many years since in 'Punch.'

None would welcome more than ourselves an improvement in the drawing and representation of armorials, in opposition to the abominable style of this heraldically degenerate age ; but there is such a mistake as putting new wine into old bottles, and in this Mr. Foster has indulged to an extent as will, to everybody unversed in the gentle science of blazon, make his Peerage pass for one of the funny books we expect to see at this festive season. If good examples of fifteenth century heraldry had been introduced in such appropriate instances as Neville, Howard, Grey, Stanley, etc., it would have been a step in the right direction, but to invest recent grants with these fine old coats is absurd. Nor can anything be more grotesque than some of the designs. We have incidentally noticed the treatment of banners, but the playing with supporters and coronets is equally remarkable ; of the latter, they are sometimes here, sometimes there, and sometimes nowhere, and this last course we should prefer to the very singular one of placing them under the shield or (as in some cases) with the supporters sitting in (and in Lord de Vesci's kneeling on) them.¹ The Duke of Roxburgh's supporters look like Cain and Abel, those of Lord Kimberley as if having a regular good "go in," and exemplifying the motto "frappe fort," which is on a scroll between them. The monkeys of the Duke of Leinster, Lord St. John, etc. seem to have been the special delight of the artist. they are represented peering round slyly, as if discussing in bewilderment their altered circumstances ; and the jocundity of the emancipated nigger, who should be engaged in supporting the shield of his benefactor Sir Thos. Fowell Buxton, upsets the little gravity left to us for the further description of these eccentricities. But we must not omit mention of Mr. Foster's hatchments. In the instances of extinct peerages, where the last possessor left widow or children surviving, the melancholy device has been adopted of substituting a ghastly funeral hatchment for the arms. Nor is the proper rule of hatchments adhered to, the groundwork being all black, and the arms in every case those of a bachelor, thus not only ignoring the wife, but heraldically bastardising the issue. We presume that Mr. Foster will not in any further edition of this work continue this most incongruous innovation, but if he does we would suggest that widows' caps should be placed on the heads of the supporters, and that a touching and telling effect might be produced by surmounting the whole with the vacant arm-chair, and putting his late lordship's coronet and cushion in it. Why Lord Trimleston should have been spared this hatchment gibbeting is another inconsistency of the book, and on a par with the retention for no sufficient reason, of the pedigree and arms of Sir James Buller East.

We are sorry to detect bad taste in another and yet worse form. It is a matter of opinion how far it is justifiable (it is certainly not necessary) in such a work, to begin pedigrees with descriptions of persons as "Clothiers of Bradford," "Grocers of Exeter," &c., or to advertise the anomalous positions of the holders of existing titles as being in the "Dublin Constabulary," "Banker's Clerk," &c., &c. ; but the refinement of needless cruelty is reached in the case of a baronet, when, after the fact of his having had children by his wife both before and after marriage is sufficiently referred to in the narrative, the age at death of a deceased daughter is given, for no earthly purpose but to assign the poor girl to the anti-nuptial issue. Why single her out? Why mention her at all?

Mr. Foster's dealing with the Baronetage is original—he has introduced the interesting list by Robert Milne of the Nova Scotia creations, and has consigned to what he terms "Chaos" a number of these dignities as to which he or others entertain doubts—some of them are thus well placed—but others are not, and we wonder that he did not have a Chaos for Peers as well, and tell us something about Fairfax, Ruthven and Valentia. Had it been "mine enemy" instead of a friend, or friends, who had written this book, though we must have lost all the patience attributed to the Patriarch who sighed for that 'vantage ground, when in turning over page by page we came to some improvement to suggest or some mistake to correct, we feel that we could not have properly reviewed it, without repeating Heraldic history, and publishing as it were a line for line emendation as Vincent did for Brooke. As it is, we leave to the well-known and proved energy of Mr. Foster the revision and correction of these errors. Let him again woo Garter—let him again enlist the unremitting attention of Bluemantle, and point out to them that their good works will surely be rewarded hereafter. Let him avoid the present confusion of reference to his book by putting the title at the beginning of each article, and every name or title with the prefix "de" under the letter D. Let him alter the misleading heading of his Knightage, and when he makes cross-references (ex. gr. "Cromartie" genealogy under "Sutherland,") let it be to be found. Let him allot the Royal Badges, on the back of the cover, to their proper nationalities, and explain the riddle of the device with the Prince's plume on that cover's end. And while on riddles, let him also explain what he means by "Tripp, formerly Howard" ('Baronetage,' p. 534), and we shall have far more of pleasure in reviewing his next edition than we have had of amusement in dealing, and that in no ill-natured spirit, with the result of his labor of love and years, assisted by the large resources of a King, and the large heart of a popular Pursuivant of Arms.

HAWORTH, PAST AND PRESENT. By J. HORSFALL TURNER. Brighouse, J. S. Jowett, 1879. Svo.

A native of Haworth having expressed the opinion that "a history of the township would be as acceptable to the inhabitants as to the numerous visitors," Mr. Turner has undertaken the task of compiling one, and pleads that his hobby of gathering notes gives him pleasure, and will favourably compare with most hobbies, and that "local effusions need all the encouragement they can command." The reader of this little book will not therefore expect to find the results of much original research or antiquarian learning.

Haworth is best known as the home and resting place of the Brontë family, and from the Rev. Wm. Grimshaw, the enthusiastic disciple of John Wesley, who often preached at Haworth, having spent twenty years of his life as minister there. A considerable portion of the book is devoted to particulars of these worthies. In the earlier pages notes of wills of several persons connected with Haworth are given, but as they are unaccompanied by the date of Probate, they are almost worthless for genealogical purposes. The inhabitants of Haworth are evidently a peculiar people. "They have been represented as more vicious than the inhabitants of other places. The most marked of their peculiarities . . . is their spirit of independence . . . There is no denying that these hill-siders are dogged against opposition, and retain many features considered outlandish." Their strong attachment to their native place is, however, a redeeming point in their favour. Like other manufacturing places Haworth is advancing in civilization. It has a school board, a co-operative store, a gas works, and a club, and we may now add a history. The old church, if old it can be called, as it was only erected in beginning of the last century, has been, after much controversy, pulled down to make room for, it is to be hoped, a better edifice; though it is to be regretted that the associations of the Brontë family with it should be thus severed.

Mr. Turner has in his little volume collected much valuable and interesting information about Haworth and its people, and local antiquaries will doubtless be grateful, especially when they remember that they have not bestirred themselves to do what he has done better and more exhaustively.

MEADE FAMILY.—I am desirous of discovering the parents of Robert Meade, who died in Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, U.S. of America, in the year 1754; said to be of County Limerick, Ireland, and to have settled in Philadelphia in the year 1742. His sons George and Garrett were in business in that city in 1770, and had as correspondent and personal friend, a Mr. John Barclay, of London, described "as an extensive and liberal merchant."

DE LA POLE, EARLS AND DUKES OF SUFFOLK.—In whose descendants did the representation of these Earls and Dukes of Suffolk ultimately vest?

Richard (called) 4th Duke was the last heir male of the family, and at his death in 1525, all the descendants, both male and female, of John 2nd Duke became extinct. He had a brother and sister, but I cannot find that either left issue. Consequently it may be assumed that the representation passed to the younger issue of the 2nd Earl. Of these, Sir Thomas de la Pole, third son, is stated to have left a daughter and heiress, Catherine, who is usually said to have been the wife of Sir Miles Stapleton of Bedale, co. York ('Visitation of Yorks. 1612'), but considerable ambiguity rests on this marriage. I shall be indebted to any correspondent who can throw light on the point.

NOTE AS TO THE PARENTAGE OF BLANCHE AUDLEY,
THE WIFE OF ROBERT HATCH OF WOLLEY, CO.
DEVON

By Sir WILLIAM R. DRAKE, F.S.A.

When I compiled the "Memorials of the HATCH Family," printed in the 'Genealogist,' vol. i, pp. 313, 368, I adopted the statement made in the Visitation of Cornwall in 1620 (Coll. Arms MS., 2 C. i, p. 398), where Blanche the wife of Robert Hatch of Wolley is described as "FILIA ROWLANDI AUDLEY FILII JACOBI DNI. AUDLEY;" but the result of a careful examination of the point has since satisfied me that the Heralds were in error, and that Lord Audley's son Rowland, died without lawful issue.

James¹ Baron de Audley was son and heir of Nicholas Baron de Audley of Hely (who died in 1319) by Joan daughter of William Lord Martyn, and coheirress (with her sister Eleanor, who married Philip Baron de Columbar) of her brother William Martyn on his death without issue in 1326. James de Audley, who was born about 1312 and died 1 April, 1386, was twice married. By his first wife, Joan, daughter of Roger Mortimer Earl of March, he had three children, viz., Nicholas Lord Audley, who born in 1336, died in 1391 without issue, Joan married to Sir John Touchet by whom she had issue, and Margaret who was the wife of Sir Robert Hillary and died in 1410 without issue. The second wife of James Lord Audley was Isabel daughter of Roger Lord Strange of Knockyn, by whom he had three sons, Thomas de Audley, Rowland, and James, and one daughter, Margaret who married Fulk Lord Fitzwarine.

In 1370 (44 Edward III) James de Audley levied a fine of the Manor of Tawstock in Devon,² having for its object the settlement of the reversion to which as heir at law of his Aunt Eleanor (Columbar) who died s.p. 1343-4 (17 Edw. III), he was contingently entitled in that property, in favor of the sons of his second marriage (Thomas, Rowland, and James) and their respective issue, with an ultimate remainder in default of issue to the right heirs of said Thomas. The three sons Thomas, Rowland, and James, died without issue² and Tawstock became the estate of Fulk Fitzwarine (grandson of Margaret Audley and Sir John Touchet) "as Kinsman and next of Kin of Thomas, viz., son of Fulk, son of Margaret sister of Thomas."

¹ This James Baron de Audley was assumed by Dugdale to have been the Sir James de Audley, the chivalrous hero of Poitiers, whose gallantry Froissart chronicles, and in this respect Dugdale has been followed by Collins and all subsequent Peerage writers; but Beltz ('Memorials of the Order of the Garter,' p. 75 et seq.) satisfactorily establishes the contrary.

Although it is thus clear that Blanche Hatch was not the grand-daughter of James Lord Audley, she may have been the daughter and heiress or coheiress of a Rowland Audley of the same noble family who I have not succeeded in tracing. She is so described by Cotgrave (H. M. 3967, p. 180), in the Devon Visitation 1564-5, in the Cornwall Visitation, 1620, and the Somerset Visitation 1623. The Herald's opinion as to the lady's paternity and heirship is further evinced by their assigning to the descendants of her marriage with Robert Hatch the Audley coat differenced by a crescent. See ped. MALLETT Visit. Devon 1564-5.

I append a translated copy of an Abstract of the King's Writ with an elucidary tabular pedigree showing the genealogical facts it discloses, which will assist any of your readers who may be disposed to undertake the task of working out the pedigrees of the Brus, Tracy, Martyn, Audley, and Fitzwaryn families, and reconciling the (in several instances) conflicting statements to be found in Glover's Pedigrees H. M. 807, Dugdale's 'Baronage,' 2 vols., folio, 1675-6, vol. i, pp. 414, 443-6, 621, 729, 746-751, Pole's 'Devonshire,' 4to., 1791, and Nicolas and Courthorpe's 'Historic Peerage of England,' 8vo., 1857, pp. 35, 201, 316, 479, &c.

TRANSLATION OF ABSTRACT OF WRIT FROM KING RICHARD II. TO THE SHERIFF OF DEVON, DATED FROM YORK, 23 Nov. 1392.¹

Richard 2nd to the Sheriff of Devon. WHEREAS it was found by Inquisition taken before John Keynes, Escheator, and returned into Chancery that a Fine² was levied in the Court of Edward 3rd in the Octaves of St. Hillary in the 8th year (Jan'y. 20th, 1334-5) between Lewis de Cammoys, parson of the Church of Combmartin (Devon), and Baldwin Ayllmere, plaintiffs, and Philip de Columbaris and Eleanor his wife, defendants, of the Manor of Tawstok with the appurtenances, by which Fine Philip and Eleanor acknowledged the Manor to be the right of Lewis. And for this acknowledgment Baldwin and Lewis granted for themselves and the heirs of Lewis that the Manor which Margaret, who was wife of William Martyn, Knight, then held in dower of the inheritance of Lewis, and which after the decease of Margaret ought to revert to Lewis and Baldwin and the heirs of Lewis; after the decease of Margaret to Philip and Eleanor for their lives, and after the decease of Philip and Eleanor the Manor was to descend to Ralph Basset the younger and Alice his wife and the heirs of their bodies issuing, and if the said Ralph and Alice die without heir of their bodies issuing the manor is to remain to the right heirs of Eleanor, which said Margaret, Philip and Eleanor died and Ralph and Alice likewise died, after whose death a certain Ralph Basset Chivaler as son and heir of Ralph and Alice entered into the Manor by colour of the said fine and thereof died seised without heir of his body issuing whereby the Manor ought to remain to Nicholas D'Audelee Chivaler son and heir of James D'Audelee son of Johanna sister of the said Eleanor and that Nicholas is full age. We on the 24th June in the 14th year of our reign (1390) for a fine paid in our hanaper have respited the homage and fealty of Nicholas to us in this behalf due up to the quinzaine of St. Michael then next to come (Oct. 13th 1390); and by our Writ we have ordered to the said late Escheator that, having received security from Nicholas concerning his reasonable relief to us then to be paid to our Exchequer, to Nicholas of the manor in his bailwick, which by the death of Ralph Basset Chivaler was taken into our hands, he cause to have full seisin without delay. AND afterwards it being found by another Inquisition¹ taken before Walter Corun and Thomas Aston by our command and likewise returned into our Chancery that Nicholas Audelegh of Helegh Chivaler deceased held in fee tail on the day he died two parts of the Manor of Taustok with the appurtenances and the advowson of the Church of the said Manor of us in capite by the service of the 18th part of ... of the Barony of Barnstaple, and that Loretta late Countess of Leicester gave the Manor and Advowson to Matilda her neice daughter of William de Brause brother of the said Countess and to the heirs of the body of the said Matilda issuing, which Matilda was seised in fee of the Manor and advowson by virtue of that gift, and from Matilda the manor and advowson descended to a certain Johanna as daughter and heir of Matilda, and from Johanna they descended to a certain William Martyn Chivaler as son and heir of Johanna and from William they descended to Johanna and Eleanor as daughters and heiresses of William, which said Eleanor died without heir of her body issuing; and from Johanna, daughter of William, the manor and advowson descended to James D'Audeley as son and heir of Johanna daughter of William, and from James they descended to Nicholas as son and heir of James, which Nicholas died seised thereof in form aforesaid; and that Margaret whom Roger Hillary Knight took to wife one of the sisters and heiresses of Nicholas is of full age, and John Tochet son of John son of Johanna another of the sisters and Fulk Fitz Waryn son of Fulk son of Margaret the third sister of Nicholas then being within age are Kinsmen and the other next heirs of Nicholas. On the 24th January last past (1391-2) by another Writ² we have ordered James de Chuddelegh Chivaler our late Escheator in the County aforesaid that, having taken the fealty of the said Roger to us due for the pourparty of Margaret falling to her of the two parts and the advowson according to the law of England, and having received security from Roger and

Margaret concerning his reasonable relief which was then to be paid to us at our Exchequer, and having made lawful partition of the two parts aforesaid and of the advowson according to law according to the extent thereof made, or another if it be necessary again to be made, in the presence of the nearest friends of John Tochet and Fulk Fitzwaryn by you thereof to be forewarned, or of their attorneys if they wish to be present, into three equal parts, he cause Roger and Margaret to have full seisin without delay of the pourparty of the said Margaret affecting her thereof towards that partition according to law and custom, which by the death of Nicholas were taken into our hands, the pourparties of John Tochet and Fulk Fitz Waryn touching them thereof according to that partition according to law and custom being retained in our hands until we have ordered anything else thereof, as appears on the Chancery rolls. AND because on Tuesday next after the Feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Mary last past (March 26th 1392) by another Inquisition¹ taken by our command before John Wadham William Hankeford and the late Escheator and returned into Chancery it was found that WILLIAM MARTYN Chivaler was seised in fee of the Manor of Taustock together with the advowson of the church belonging to the Manor and of other Manors lands and tenements in the said county, and had issue William Johanna and Eleanor and died seised in fee of those Manors &c., after whose death William entered into them as son and heir and married one Margaret and Johanna married Nicholas de Audley and Eleanor married Philip de Columbaris, and William son of William died seised thereof in fee without issue, after whose death Nicholas and Johanna and Philip and Eleanor entered into the Manors &c. as in right of Johanna and Eleanor sisters and heiresses of William son of William, and assigned to Margaret the Manor and advowson to hold in the name of dower in allowance of her dower affecting her concerning the other Manors, &c. in the same county. And afterwards Nicholas and Johanna Philip and Eleanor made a partition of the Manor lands and tenements and of the reversion of the Manor of Taustock and the advowson So that the reversion of the Manor together with the advowson and the other Manors &c. were allowed (as) the pourparty of Eleanor. By virtue of which allowance and pourparty Margaret attorned herself to Philip and Eleanor, and afterwards a certain fine² was levied at York in the Octave of St. Hillary 8 Edward III (Jan. 20th 1334-5) before William de Herle and other Justices between Lewis de Cammoys parson of the church of Combe Martyn and Baldwin Aillemere plaintiff and Philip and Eleanor his wife deforciant, of the Manor and advowson of Taustok (The Fine here quoted is similar to that which is recited at the commencement of the writ). By virtue of which grant Margaret thereof attorned to Philip and Eleanor, and that Philip died and Eleanor died without heir of their body, and that Nicholas and Johanna had issue James and the said Alice, and from Ralph and Alice then his wife issued a certain Ralph, and Ralph and Alice had no more issue. And Ralph and Alice died, and Margaret died, after whose death Ralph son of Ralph entered into the manor and advowson by virtue of the remainder. AND afterwards before the Justices at Westminster from Easterday in three weeks 44 Edw. III

² Fine (previously recited) levied 8 Edw. III (20 January, 1334-5).

(May 5th 1370) a fine¹ was levied between Thomas D'Audeley Plaintiff, and the said James de Audeley Kinsman and heir of Eleanor namely son of Johanna sister of Eleanor by the name of James D'Audeley of Heley deforciant, of the Manor of Taustock with the appurtenances, to which the advowson of the church then belonged, by which fine James granted for himself and his heirs that the Manor and advowson by the name of the manor of Taustok with the appurtenances, which Ralph held for life of the inheritance of James, and which after Ralph's death ought to revert to James and his heirs, remained after the death of Ralph to the aforesaid Thomas and the heirs of his body begotten, and if Thomas die without issue then after his death the Manor was to remain to Rodeland, brother of Thomas, and the heirs of his body begotten, and if Rodeland die without issue then after his decease the Manor is to go to James his brother and the heirs of his body begotten, and if James, brother of Rodeland, die without issue then after the death of James the Manor is to remain to the right heirs of Thomas. AND that each of them, the said THOMAS, RODELAND and JAMES DIED WITHOUT ISSUE, and Ralph, son of Ralph, died without issue, AFTER WHOSE DEATH THE MANOR DESCENDED AND REMAINED TO FULK FITZWARYN AS KINSMAN AND RIGHT HEIR OF THOMAS, NAMELY SON OF FULK, SON OF MARGARET, SISTER OF THOMAS, AND THAT FULK, SON OF FULK, THEN AGED TWO YEARS AND MORE IS NEXT HEIR OF THOMAS, and that the Manor is held of us in capite by Knight service. AND that the custody of the Manor by reason of the minority of Fulk, son of Fulk, for the reason aforesaid belongs to us. We command you that you make known to Roger Hillary and Margaret his wife that they be before us in our Chancery in the Octave of St. Hillary next to come, wherever it shall then be, to show if they know or can say wherefore we ought not to take again into our hands the pourparty of Margaret wife of Roger touching her concerning the two parts of the Manor and the advowson according to law and custom, and assigned to Roger and Margaret by pretext of our command and to retain the same in our hands up to the lawful age of Fulk, son of Fulk, and to do and receive what the Court shall consider in this behalf. And do you have there the names of those by whom you shall make it known to them, and this Writ. Witness myself at York, 23rd November in the 16th year of our reign (1392).

THE BARONS OF BURFORD.

BY THE EDITOR. NO. II.

Richard Cornwall, Baron of Burford (the last who is mentioned in vol. iii, p. 228), married Jenet daughter and heir of Henry Wogan of Wiston, co. Salop, Esq. He died at the age of seventy-five, and was buried at Burford 9 June 1569. She died in 1547, aged 40. Full accounts of the monuments of the Cornwalls at Burford will be found in the supplement to Nash's 'History of Worcestershire,' pp. 78-80; Gough's 'Sepulchral Monuments,' vol. ii, pp. 78*-87; and Dingley's 'History from Marble,' printed by the Camden Society, pp. 116, cxlviii, cccvi, etc. From these sources much can be added to this pedigree, but as it is already in print it is useless to reproduce it here. Mr. Blakeway mentions several sheriffs of this family in his 'Sheriffs of Shropshire,' pp. 72, 83, 92, etc. The dates of baptisms, marriages, and burials here given are all, unless otherwise stated, taken from the Burford Registers.

Mr. Gough visited Burford 10 July, 1792, at which date he probably copied the inscriptions on the Cornwall tombs. As to the origin of the title of "Baron of Burford," he says, "the Cornwalls were termed Barons because the tenure of the manor was by barony." Mr. Blakeway adds, that the Lords of Burford were not summoned to Parliament, "an exemption first claimed as a privilege, but, no doubt, afterwards lamented as a privation." Richard Cornwall buried in 1569 is not called "Baron" in the Parish Register. His son and heir Edmund being the first to whom the title is applied. I give the entries, as made in the Register, of some of the Barons.

1585. Buryed the worthy man Edmunde Cornewail Esquior
Baron of Burforde the xvjth daye of Julye.
1615. Buryed that worthy man Thomas Cornwall Baron of Burford the xxjth of May.
1636. Buried that worthy man Sir Thomas Cornewail, Knight, Baron of Burford the xijth day of January.
1671. Buried Sr Guilbert Cornewall, Knight, and Baron of Burford, Oct. 5th.
1686. Bur. Major Thomas Cornwall, Baron of Burford, July 22.

Richard Cornwall and Jenet his wife had issue:—

1. Edmund Cornwall, Baron of Burford, called by some the STRONG Baron, was a man of great size and strength. (See accounts of him in Nash's 'Worcestershire,' ii, 418; Gough's 'Sepulchral Monuments,' ii, 80; Blakeway's 'Sheriffs of Shropshire,' 92). He died unmarried in 1585, aged 50, and was buried at Burford. He is the first who is called Baron in Townsend's pedigree, and he calls him the STOUT Baron. I am inclined to think that Townsend is right, and that the appellation STRONG belonged to his ancestor, of the same name, mentioned as such in my former paper, vol. iv, p. 227.

2. Thomas Cornewall, Baron of Burford, succeeded his brother. Buried at Burford, 1615.
1. Mary, married 14 July, 1567, James Warnecombe of Hereford. Was his second wife. Died s.p.
2. Anne, married Francis Walsh of Shellesley Walsh, co. Worcester. M.I., Nash's 'Worcestershire,' ii, 350.

Thomas Cornewall married Katherine daughter of John Harley of Brampton Brian Castle, co. Hereford, and widow of John Cresset of Upton Cresset. She was buried 17 February, 1623. They had issue:—

1. Sir Thomas Cornewall, Kt., Baron of Burford, of whom presently.
2. Sir Francis Cornewall, knighted at Chatham 4 July, 1604. Buried 7 July, 1622. Married Joyce daughter and heir of Edward Combes of Wasperton, co. Warwick (Harl. Soc., xii, 231). Buried 16 July, 1603. Their issue was, i. Thomas, Serjeant-Major in the expedition to the Isle of Rhé, a° 1627, killed there. ii. Richard, bap. 8 July, 1603. And Anne, married Anthony Woodhull of Mollington, co. Oxford; she died 15 May, 1678, and he 1 September, 1675, aged 67. M.I. at Mollington. (Harl. Soc., v, 266).
3. Edward Cornewall married (by licence) at Eastham, co. Worcester, 31 August, 1637, to Mrs. Mary Hopton. She is mentioned in will of Dame Anne Cornewall as "my sister Mrs. Mary Cornewall." He was buried 16 September, 1645.
4. Richard Cornewall, in holy orders. Portioner of Burford in 1608. Buried 23 March, 1610.

Sir Thomas Cornewall, Baron of Burford, called the GREAT Baron. Knighted at the Charterhouse 11 May, 1603. Buried 12 January, 1636. Will proved at Hereford 1636, but now missing. Married Anne daughter of Sir Gilbert Lyttleton of Franckley, co. Wore., Kt.; died 30 January and buried at Eastham 3 February, 1656. (Nash's 'Worcestershire,' vol. i, pp. 364, 493). Her will as "Dame Anne Cornewall of Eastham in the County of Worcester, widowe," is dated 23 June, 1655. "I leaue vnto S^r Gilbert Cornewall my Sonne a tablett or Jewell given vnto my late deceased husband S^r Thomas Cornewall by Prince Henric. And from and inmediately after the decease of my said Sonne Sir Gilbert Cornewall I doe hereby will and devise the said Tablett or Jewell to Thomas Cornewall esquire my grandsonne eldest sonne and heire apparent of my said sonne Sr Gilbert Cornewall." Residue to son Robert Cornewall, Esq., and appoints him executor. Witnesses, Nich. Acton, John Barneby, and Edward Benson. Codicil dated 24 June, 1655. My grandson John Barneby to be executor (as well as son, Robt. Cornewall). Codicil dated 20 January, 1656. To be buried at Eastham. £20 to daughter Mrs. Mary Reade. To my daughter Mrs. Elizabeth Cornewall three of my best bedds, &c., and my picture which hangs over the parlour, and my wedding ring. My sister Mrs. Mary Cornewall. My niece Mrs. Elizabeth Barneby. My niece Mrs. Anne Hare. To grandson Mr. John Barneby my husband's picture from head to foot being in the parlour. My grandchild Mrs. Ursula Phillips. My esteemed friend and kinsman Doctor Harford. Grandchild Mrs. Mary Cornewall. Grandchild Compton Reade, Esquire. My son-in-law Mr. John Donsey. Grandchild Mr. Gilbert Hais my watch and the millstones now fixed at Brilley. Grandchildren Mary and Hester Donsey. Old servant Edmund Nott. My daughter Mrs. Anne Knight my dyamond ring which I doe vsually weare. Bishop Andrews' Sermons to my cosen Phillips. Great church Bible to his son John. Quarto Bible to Edmund Cornewall. Proved in P.C.C. 24 April 1657 by Robert Cornewall, and power reserved to John Barneby. (Ruthen 142). Sir Thomas Cornewall and Dame Anne had issue:—

1. Sir Gilbert Cornewall, Kt., of whom hereafter.
2. Thomas Cornwall, bap. 30 Sep. 1599. Died in the Low Countries, s.p.
3. George Cornewall, bap. 1 August, 1602, Citizen and Grocer of London. Will dated 19 November, 1627. Mentions brother Mr. James Cornewall. Sisters Mrs. Catherine Barneby, Mrs. Marie Read, Mrs. Anne Cornwaill, Mrs. Elizabeth Cornewall, and Mrs. Margaret Cornewall. Cosen Mr. Charles Whitecott merchant. Brother Robert Cornewall to be sole executor. Codicil dated at Aleppo, † October, 1633, in which testator appoints Edward Proctor assignee as to his business there. Proved by said executor in P.C.C. 10 February, 1630. (Seager 20).
4. Robert Cornewall, bap. 24 August, 1607. Of Spertrey in the parish of Burford. Buried 25 March, 1676. Will dated 25 November, 1675. Mentions daughter Anne Tathwell. To daughter Elizabeth Cornewall my signett ring. My five daughters, Elizabeth Cornewall, Martha Cornewall, Hannah Cornewall, Mary Cornewall, and Sarah Cornewall. To my wife Mary Cornewall my diamond ring. "I also giue vnto my wife Mary Cornewall the Pettigree of the Family of the Cornewalls Barons of Burford which I desire her not to sell or dispose thereof But to leave the same unto my Children." Grandchild Mary Tathwell. To daughter Elizabeth Cornewall my ivory lute.¹ Wife excecatrix and residuary legatee. She proved in P.C.C. 16 June, 1676. (Benee 109).

Mary Cornewall survived her husband more than twenty years, and was buried 8 June, 1698, as "of Tenbury, widow." Her will as of Tenbury, widow, is dated 4 June, 1698. To be buried in the chancel of the parish church of Burford. To daughter Martha Holland of the parish of Tenbury widow moiety of the tithes of Wolverley co. Worcester. Grand-daughter Ann Holland daughter of said Martha Holland. Grandchild Jane Holland. My two grandsons George and Samuel Holland. Grandchild Mary Tathwell the daughter of Ann Tathwell of Raventhorpe in the co. of Lincoln widow. My daughter Ann Tathwell. Grandsons Thomas Holland and Cornewall Tathwell. Appoints Martha Holland excecatrix. She proved in P.C.C. 5 January, 1699-1700. (Noel 4). The issue of Robert and Mary Cornewall was:—

- i. Robert Cornewall, bap. 10 May, 1654, buried 13 April, 1655.
- ii. Robert Cornewall, bap. 24 October, 1665, buried 2 April, 1669.
 - i. Anne, born 30 November and bap. 27 December, 1649, married ... Tathwell.
 - ii. Elizabeth, bap. 1 May, 1656.
 - iii. Martha, bap. 14 March, 1658, married ... Holland.
 - iv. Hannah, bap. 28 March, 1661.
 - v. Mary, bap. 8 October, 1663.
 - vi. Sarah, bap. 21 Feb. 1666.

1. Katherine. Bap. 9 March 1595, married 27 January, 1607, to John Barneby of the Hill (? the Hill in the Parish of Eastham; and probably he was the son of Sir John Barneby of Boekleton, Kt. See 'Genealogist,' i, 236). It will be noticed that she was married before she attained the age of twelve. The first entry of the baptism of a child of hers which I have met with is in August, 1616. ('Genealogist,' ii, 353).
2. Mary. Bap. 21 Sep. 1600. Married 8 September, 1624 to ¹ The Strong Baron is said to have been a skilful player on the lute.

Thomas, son and heir of Sir Thomas Reade of Barton, Knt. He was buried (at Burford) 14 December, 1634. The Reades and Cornewalls frequently intermarried. The sister of Thomas Reade was wife of Sir Gilbert Cornwall Baron of Burford brother to his wife Mary. Of their children, Anne was wife of Thomas Cornwall Baron of Burford son of Sir Gilbert; Mary wife of John Cornwall brother of the said Thomas; and Sir Compton Reade, Kt. and Bart., son and heir of Thomas Reade, married Mary sister of Thomas and John Cornwall. The wife of Thomas Cornwall, Baron of Burford, son of the last named Thomas married Catherine daughter of William Reade of London, so that three Barons of Burford from grandfather to grandson married wives of the name of Reade. Several entries from the Burford register relating to the Reade family, and other people connected with the Cornewalls will be found in 'The Genealogist,' vol. ii, pp. 353-4.

3. Anne. Bap. 18 December, 1603, married ... Knight.
4. Elizabeth. Bap. 23 March, 1605. Died 24 (M.I. at Burford) and buried 28 October, 1675. Will dated 20 November, 1668, in which she is described as Elizabeth Cornwall daughter of Sir Thomas Cornwall of Burford, Kt., deceased. To be buried at Burford. To my brother Sir Gilbert Cornwall, Kt., my lady mother's picture from head to foot. Twenty nobles for a convenient monument to be placed over my dead body. My brother Robert Cornwall. My sister Read. To my sister Knight my silver tobacco box. Land at Eastham which she bought of Richard Walker of Eastham to Edmund Cornwall eldest son of my nephew John Cornwall in fee, but to pay his brother Gilbert £10. Residue to aunt Mrs. Mary Cornwall and my niece Ann Hare, and appoints them executors. Good friend Mr. John Smith, my nephew John Cornwall, and my nephew Bridstock Harford to see this my will performed. Proved in P.C.C. by Mary Cornwall and Anne Hare alias Smith, 15 January, 1675-6. (Bence 2).
5. Margaret. Bap. 29 August, 1613. Married at Eastham 1 February, 1639. "Humfrey Hare y^e sonne of Humfrey Hare gent & Joan his wife of ye pish. of Orrilton¹ and mistres Margaret Cornwall y^e daughter of Sir Thomas Cornwall, Knight, and y^e lady An his wife of Estham were maryed by license the first day of February."²

² 1640. Anne the daughter of Humfrey Hare gent. and Margaret his wife of Estha was baptized the xxviiith of december.

1641. Gilbert the sonne of Humfrey Hare of Brille gent. & Margaret his wife borne in Estham was baptized ye xxviiith of October.

'Par. Regr. of Eastham.'

She married secondly John Dansey, Esq., and was buried at Eastham, 1 November, 1655. See baptisms of her children by Dansey, 'Genealogist,' vol. iii, p. 134; and monumental inscription Nash's 'Worcestershire,' vol. i, p. 364; also Robinson's 'Mansions of Herefordshire,' p. 46.

Sir Gilbert Cornewall, Kt., Baron of Burford, bap. 6 June, 1598. Knighted at Theobalds, December, 1620. Married Elizabeth daughter of Sir Thomas Reade of Barton, co. Berks, Kt. - 1 and 2. George and James Cornewall, twins. Bap. 19 April, 1688.

¹ Adm'on de bonis non granted at Hereford 4 June, 1728 to Vincent Wood, Gent., adm'or with will annexed, of Francis Cornewall.

3. Edmond Cornewall. Bap. 18 November, 1691. Died young.
4. Francis Cornewall, last Baron of Burford.
5. Richard Cornewall. Bap. 12 January, 1695.
1. Mary. Buried 1 August, 1705.
2. Anne. Bap. 8 November, 1692 (? married at Hereford Cathedral 29 Oct. 1722 to Poston Stacey).
3. Catherine. Bap. 6 January, 1693. Married ... Fox.

Francis Cornewall, last Baron of Burford, married Mary daughter of James Woodhouse of Woodhouse, co. Hereford, by whom he had issue, Woodhouse Cornewall, died young; Francis Cornewall, bap. 22 September, 1712, died young; and Anna Maria, sole daughter and heir, born 14 April and bap. 12 May, 1711, married George Legh of High Legh, co. Chester, Esq., whose descendant Lt.-Col. Henry Cornewall Legh of High Legh is the present representative of the Barons of Burford. (Ormerod's 'Cheshire,' Edn. Helsby, vol. i, p. 462).

The marriage of Francis Cornewall and Mary Woodhouse took place in 1708. It is probable that it did not turn out happily, at all events the recitals of the following Act, and the terms of Francis Cornewall's will lead to this conclusion. The Act, 4 George I, No. 35, is entitled "An Act for the exonerating and discharging the Manors, etc. of Francis Cornwall, Esq., etc. from certain articles of agreement made before the marriage of the said Francis Cornwall." It recites that, whereas by certain articles of agreement dated 31 August, 1708, between Francis Cornewall of Burford, co. Salop, of the first part, and James Woodhouse of the Woodhouse, co. Hereford, Esq. (since deceased), and Anne his wife, and Mary Woodhouse, spinster, their only daughter, of the other part, said Francis Cornwall in consideration of a marriage and marriage portion conveyed his estate to trustees (some part to be charged with annuity of £200 to Thomas Cornewall his father, and after his decease with annuity of £50 to Katherine wife of said Thomas Cornewall and mother of said Francis Cornewall) to use of said Mary for life, remainder to heirs in tail; and James Woodhouse settled his estates on his daughter and her heirs. And whereas the marriage took effect and they have issue between them Anna Maria Cornwall their only child now living; and whereas James Woodhouse was encumbered so that he could not perform his covenants, and died in the Island of Jamaica some time since, and whereas said Mary Cornwall now wife of Francis Cornwall by indenture dated 27 May last past in consideration of £40 to be paid her yearly during the joint lives of her and said Francis Cornwall in case they shall live separate, and of annuity of £100 after decease of said Francis Cornwall, etc. And Francis Cornwall contracted great debts, so that he is in danger of being ruined, and whereas he desires £3000 to be paid to his daughter Anna Maria Cornwall at his death, etc. Be it enacted, etc. Estate to be charged with payment of £3000 to daughter, and annuities of £40 and £100 to wife, and the Hundred of Overs and Park of Burford, &c. to be exonerated from the articles above recited, dated 31 August, 1708, 7th Anne, etc.

Francis Cornwall made his will 2 February, 1726, as "of Tenbury in co. Worcester, Esq." Gives to "Mrs. Eliza Mansfield who now dwells with me" annuity of £40 a year. To Mrs. Mary Cornwall my wife one shilling. To my daughter Anna Maria the sum of £10 over and above her fortune settled by Act of Parliament. Appoints Mr. John Greene of Tenbury residuary legatee and executor. John Greene the executor and Mary Cornwall the relict renounced and administration was granted by P.C.C. 6 July, 1727 to John Castell and Vincent Wood guardians lawfully assigned to Anna Maria Cornwall a minor the daughter and sole issue of Francis Cornwall late of Tenbury, but in the Parish of St. George the Martyr, co. Middlesex, Esq., deceased. Administration again granted 23 May, 1732, to Anna Maria Legh, wife of George Legh, daughter of deceased.

With Francis Cornwall ended the eldest line of the family, and the titular "Barons of Burford." The Leghs of High Legh still use the supporters of the Cornwalls, two lions bezantee, and are one of the few families of untitled nobility who add to their arms a distinction generally confined to peers. Burford was sold to Humphrey Bowles, a great glassman, of London, and is now the possession of Lord Northwick.

I am unable to assign their proper places in the pedigree to the persons mentioned in the following extracts from the Burford Registers:

1639. Maria daughter of Arthur Cornwall, gent., and of Ann his wife, bap. 4 August.
 1641. Arthur son of Arthur Cornwall, gent., bap. 2 August.
 1678. Buried. Mrs. Sarah Cornwall, July 25.
 1680. Buried. Mrs. Marie Cornwall, widow, of Teamdbury (Tenbury), 17 April.¹
 1682. Buried Mrs. Elizabeth Cornwall, June 6.

The following is a note of the will of Elizabeth Cornwall, who I take to have been the wife of Thomas Cornwall, Baron of Burford, and daughter of Sir Robert or Rouland Lenthall, mentioned before, vol. iii, p. 227.

Elizabeth Cornwall. Dated 3 January, 1489. To be buried within the church of St. Mark, within the chapel of St. Nicholas (Bristol). Son Sir Edmund Kornwelle, my daughter his wife. His eldest daughter and his youngest daughter. Jenet Ive. Elizabeth Chippenham. Maryon Kachema. Jane ap Hopkyn. Son Sir Edmond Cornwall, Sir John Randolf, and Richard Went, executors. All proved in P.C.C. 6 June, 1489. (Milles, 23).

¹ Her will as Mary Cornwall of Tenbury, co. Worcester, widow, "very aged and infirm," is dated 29 March, 1680. She mentions her kinsman, Mr. Edmund Cornwall, eldest son to Mr. John Cornwall of the Heath in the county of Hereford. Elizabeth Cornwall and Anne Cornwall, daughters of the said John Cornwall. Appoints kinsman, Mr. John Smith, Vicar of Tenbury, sole executor. He proved at Hereford, 17 June, 1680.

 107. William de Aldithley, or Audley, 5th baron by Tenure of the elder line (ob. 1281, without issue), brother and heir of Henry, the 4th baron (ob. 1275, without issue). Was succeeded by his brother and heir Nicholas, the 6th baron by Tenure (ob. 1299).
 112. Ralph Daubency, 2nd, and last, Baron by Writ, son and heir of Elias, the 1st Baron (ob. 1305). Was summoned to Parliament in 1342, but never afterwards; and though he left male issue, his descendants were never summoned until his great-great-grandson.

113. Elias Daubency, 1st Baron by Writ (brother and heir of Philip de Albini, the 3rd, and last, baron by Tenure, who died 1294). Aged 30 in 1294, and died in 1305, leaving Ralph his son and heir, the 2nd, and last, Baron, aged only 11.
114. Philip de Albini, 3rd, and last, baron by Tenure (ob. 1294), nephew and heir of Philip, the 2nd baron (ob. 1235). Was succeeded by his brother and heir Elias, the 1st Baron by Writ.
115. Robert de Pinkeney, 9th, and last, baron by Tenure (ob. 1295, without lawful issue), son and heir of Henry, the 8th baron (ob. 1277). Was succeeded by his brother and heir Henry, the 1st, and only, Baron by Writ (aged 30 in 1295), who sold his Barony to the King in 1301, and died without issue.
129. William de Camville, brother of Gerard, the 3rd baron by Tenure. His son and heir Geoffrey ultimately became the 1st Baron by Writ, and was summoned to Parliament from 1295 to 1307. He died in the following year.
130. John Giffard, 1st Baron (of Brimsfield) by Writ (aged 17 in 1248, and ob. 1299), son and heir of Elias, 6th, and last, baron by Tenure, who died in 1248.
131. Robert Fitz-Payne, 1st Baron by Writ (ob. 1315), son and heir of Robert, 3rd, and last, baron by Tenure (ob. 1280).
137. Edmund Plantagenet, 7th Earl of Cornwall (ob. 1300, without issue, when the Earldom became extinct), son and heir of Richard Plantagenet (King of the Romans), who died in 1272.
142. Robert de Hastang, 1st Baron by Writ, was summoned to Parliament in 1311. He was still living in the 18th year of Edw. II, but was never afterwards summoned.
144. Roger de Mowbray, 1st Baron by Writ (ob. 1298), son and heir of Roger, the 6th, and last, baron by Tenure (ob. 1266). Was succeeded by his son and heir John, the 2nd Baron (ob. 1327).
159. John de Segrave, 2nd Baron by Writ (ob. 1325), son and heir of Nicholas the 1st Baron (ob. 1295.) Was aged 39 in 1295.
160. Nicholas de Segrave, 1st Baron by Writ (ob. 1295), son and heir of Gilbert, the 3rd, and last, baron by Tenure (ob. circa 1291). Was succeeded by his son and heir John, the 2nd Baron (ob. 1325).
163. William de Leyburn, subsequently 1st Baron by Writ. Summoned to Parliament from 1299 (ob. 1309). Son and heir of Roger de Leyburn, who was Sheriff of Kent from A° 48 to A° 52, Henry III.
173. Ralph de Gorges, 1st, and only, Baron by Writ, was summoned to Parliament from 1309 to 1322, but neither he or any of his descendants were ever again summoned.
176. John de la Mare, 1st, and only, Baron by Writ, was summoned to Parliament from 1299 to 1313, but his descendants were never summoned.
187. Ralph Basset, 1st Baron (of Sapcote, co. Leicester) by Writ (ob. circa 1282), son and heir of Ralph, the 3rd, and last, baron by Tenure (ob. . . .). Was succeeded by his son and heir Simon, the 2nd Baron, who was first summoned to Parliament in 1294, and it is thought died in that year.

191. Hugh Despencer, 2nd Baron by Writ (beheaded 1326), son and heir of Hugh the 1st Baron (ob. 1265). He was summoned to Parliament from 1295 to 1322.
195. Hugh de Vere, of Swanscombe, co. Kent, 1st, and only, Baron by Writ. Was a younger son of Robert de Vere, 5th Earl of Oxford. Summoned to Parliament from 1299 to 1318. Supposed to have died without issue.
196. William de Say, 7th, and last, baron by Tenure (son and heir of William, the 6th baron, who died 1272). Aged 19 in 1272. Died 1295, leaving Geoffrey his son and heir, the 1st Baron by Writ, aged 14.
198. Richard Fitz-John, 2nd Baron by Writ (aged 24 in 1276, ob. 1297), brother and heir of John the 1st Baron, who died in 1276.

DOUBTFUL NORFOLK PEDIGREES.

No. IV. CLERE.

The pedigree of Clere of Ornesby, to be found in Blomfield's 'Norfolk,' vol. viii, p. 389, and elsewhere, is so excellent an example of Elizabethan forgery that it well deserves a place in this series, especially as it was put forward earlier than 1616, on the altar tomb of Edward Clere of Blickling.

The first ten generations, nine of which there is every reason to believe are the fruits of the imagination of some courtly herald, may be tabulated thus,

Of the first five generations no trace can be found in any records. None of the four matches are mentioned elsewhere than on this pedigree; and the names of Clarrey, Clere, and Cleremont do not appear on any of the copies of the Roll of Battle Abbey, a most liberal list, by the way, of all who had any pretensions to have "come over with the Conqueror."

Nicholas Clere, (1) who is said to have been the son and heir of a William and Julian Clere, and clerk of the King's Treasury at Dublin in 1284, had an actual existence, but cannot be traced to have ever had anything to do with Ormesby or any other place in Norfolk.¹ But as he was a prisoner in Ireland for peculation in 1316 ('Plac. Parl.' i, 144), he could hardly have been great great great grandfather of Robert Clere, who only sixteen years later was a party to fines in 9 Edward II (see 'Feet of Fines, Norfolk, 9 Edward II,' Nos. 479 and 504)!!

Nicholas Clere, the peculator just mentioned having been dragged into the pedigree, had to be married, and the herald finds him for a wife Amabelle (2), daughter and heiress of Sir William de Ormesby, and endows her with the lordship of Ormesby, which is thus brought into the Clere family. To this I must make the trifling objection that Sir William de Ormesby left male issue, who enjoyed the manor till 1389, when Juliana, the last surviving co-heiress of Thomas de Ormesby, died seized of it (Blom. 'Norf.,' ii, 233, and loc. cit., and Inq. p.m., 13 Richard II, No. 36).¹

"William Clere, son and heir" of Nicholas, has given him to wife the daughter and heiress of Sir John Sneek (3). But this Sir John, long after, married the daughter and co-heir of Ellen, another of the daughters and co-heirs of Thomas de Ormesby just mentioned.

"Robert Clere, son and heir," is said to have married Melvin, daughter and heiress of Sir John Westlesse (4). Here again is another piece of the genuine Ormesby pedigree pieced on to the fabrication; for Sir John Westlesse was the son and heir of Burga, yet another of the daughters and co-heirs of Thomas de Ormesby, the last of his family.

"Nicholas Clere, son and heir," the next myth, is put down as having married Moriel, daughter of Robert Somerton (5). The names of Moriel and Robert do not appear on the Somerton pedigree, which is silent as to any match with Clere. It is noteworthy that in 1342, Robert Clere presented to Winterton, which he had bought of the heirs of the de Somerton family (Blom. 'Norf.,' xi, 197)

When we come to "Robert Clere, son and heir, living 1340," and "Alice" his wife, we begin to get on firm ground; for there was a Robert Clere of Ormesby who had a wife Alice, about 1340. But there is no proof yet that she was a de Filby at all, for neither an Alice nor a John appears in the Filby pedigree. Filby was, about this time, owned by a Robert de Filby, and it went to his co-heiresses, Joan and Isabel, wives of Richard de Berkyng and John de Holbek. The Cleres bought Holbeck's moiety in the fifteenth century. Blomfield's (x, 192) statement that in a fine of land, 16 Edward III, Alice, wife of Robert Clere is described as daughter and heiress of.....Filby of Filby, turns out on reference to the fine, to be absolutely devoid of foundation.

¹ It is difficult to say when and how the Cleres first got Ormesby. William Clere, whose will is dated 1384, is said by Blomfield (xi, 235) to have been Lord of Ormesby; but this is clearly wrong, as Juliana de Ormesby died seized in 1386. In 8 Henry V (1420-1), a Robert Clere held lord in Ormesby as of the manor (Es. 3i, 8 Henry V, No. 19), which proves he did not then hold the manor. In 7 Henry VI (1428), William Clere held (i.e.) an interest in the manor; but I cannot identify either this William or the Robert just mentioned on the printed pedigrees.

But I am inclined to think that Alice will turn out to have been a de Filby after all.

So much for the inconsistencies and absurdities of the forged pedigree which, with its accompanying heraldic shields, has been so long one of the chief objects of interest in Blickling Church to credulous antiquaries, and which was greatly respected and admired by the 'Association' on its visit there last autumn.

Now comes the strange part of the thing, which is that had the concoctor taken a little more pains with his work he would have probably hit upon what appears to me a very plausible line of descent for his employer from the noble family of De Clare.

In 1166, Ralph de Clere held Filby, the adjoining parish to Ormesby, of John, son of Robert Fitz Walter, i.e. de Clare ('Liber Niger Seace'). The de Cleres held considerable property in Norfolk, e.g., Gilbert de Clare died 1316, seized of several manors, and from the time of the Liber Niger to that of the appearance of the Cleres at Ormesby, I have come across several of the name of Clere living in the county whose existence escaped the inventor.¹

Of Robert Clere,² the first undoubted ancestor of the Cleres of Ormesby, I find that in 1316 he was described as "Robert Cleriz of Stokesby," in the 'Norfolk Feet of Fines,' 9 Edward II, Nos. 499 and 504, which refer to land in Runham, Herringby and Stokesby, and the manor of Beck. About 1324, he and his wife had a fine of land in Filby; and in 1342, they had grants of the chapel of East Somerton, and the advowson of Winterton; and in 1343 of two parts of the manor of Stratton.

WALTER RYE.

¹ In 1189, Ralph de Clere bought a fee in "Stiveton" (Sturston?). Blom., vi, 360 n. Temp. Henry III. William Clere held half Knight's fee in Sturston of Robert Fitz Walter. Ib., ii, 248.

In 1304, William Clere was deforciant of a fine of land at Sall ('Norf. Feet of Fines', Edward I, No. 942).

In 1328, Edmund Clere died seized of Sturston, and John was his son and heir (Inq. p.m., 2 Edward III, No. 41); and in 1347, the heirs of Edward (?) Clere were seized of half a Knight's fee in Sturston, which had been formerly held by William Clere ('Book of Aids,' p. 32); and in 1349, John Clere sold Sturston.

² Contemporary, and possibly identical, with him, was Robert Cler, one of the Sheriff's Summoners for Kent in 1306 ('Parl. Writs,' i, 531).

THE FAMILY OF GRAVES.

By Sir JOHN MACLEAN, F.S.A.

The following Grant of Arms to Richard Graves of Mickleton co. Gloucester, is of more than usual interest, as shewing the plea of descent upon which the Grant was made. The grantee would seem to have been of some eminence as an antiquary and a scholar. A pedigree of his family, illustrated with three portraits, will be found in Nash's 'History of Worcestershire,' vol. i, p. 198, and Rudder ('History of Gloucestershire') gives some account of Mr. Graves and his family, and mentions what estates he held in the county of Gloucester.

Mr. Richard Graves, grandfather of the above-mentioned Richard, is said to have had nineteen children, of these three only are named by Nash. He was a Bencher and afterwards Reader of, Lincoln's Inn, and his name appears as one of the Adventurers for lands in Ireland, as follows: "Richard Graves of Lincoln's Inn £200." (Book M, Record Tower, Dublin Castle).

In 1690 there was a Richard Graves possessed of property in the City of Waterford, in July of which year he was elected a freeman. He was sheriff of the city in 1700, and alderman in 1707, and he died in 1724. His son Anthony Graves had a son named Richard, whose descendants are now living.

As the Adventurers acquired property in the cities and towns of Ireland, it is not improbable that Richard Graves of Waterford was a son of the Bencher and Adventurer. Can any one give the names of his other children besides those mentioned in 'Nash,' or state if he had a son called Richard, or if any son of his settled in Ireland?

The ARMS borne by Graves of Waterford are—Vert, an eagle displayed ducally crowned Or. CREST the same.

TO ALL AND SINGULAR to whom these presents shall come John Anstis Esq^r Garter Principal King of Arms and Knox Ward Esq^r Clarence King of Arms send Greeting. WHEREAS Richard Graves of Mickleton in the County of Gloucester hath by his Petition represented to the Right Hon^{ble} Talbot Earl of Sussex one of the Lords of his Majesties most Hon^{ble} Privy Councell, Knight of the Most Hon^{ble} Order of the Bath and Deputy (with the Royal Approbation) to the Most Noble Thomas Duke of Norfolk Earl Marshal and Hereditary Marshal of England That there remaineth in the Heralds' Office an Entry of the Confirmation of the Coat, viz^t Gules an Eagle displayed Or, beaked and membered and Crowned Arg^t made to James Grave then of Heyton in Yorkshire, within the Marches of Norroy and to John Grave then of London within the Marches of Clarenceux

under the Hands and Seals, of both the Provincial Kings, bearing date 12th June 1591 33rd of Eliz. Wherein they certifie this Coat to have been the Arms of their Ancestors of the said James and John Grave and thence descended to them, as being the Sons of William Son of Robert, Son of John Grave of Heyton aforesaid Gentlemen, And that in Regard these Kings of Arms could not find any Crest belonging to that Coat (as was the usual Case as they Alledge in many antient Arms) therefore they then granted a Demy Eagle erased Or, and thereon a Crown Argent, beaked Gules to be used by the Posterity of these two Grantees (sic) only—from the Tenour of which Confirmation it appears that all the Descendants from John Grave of Heyton, the great Grandfather of the Grantees, are strictly entitled to these Arms, with the proper Markes of Cadency and Distinction. That Heyton now called Clock Heyton, is an Hamlet within the Parish of Burstall in the West-riding of Yorkshire not far distant from Pontefract, in or near which place there is an Hamlett, Written in Antient Deeds, Greava, Greva, La Greave, and Greve now called Greaves and Graves, which, without doubt, gave that Surname to a Family which were Benefactors to the Hospital of the Holy Trinity founded in Pontefract, whereof there are contained Entries from the fourth Year of King Edw. 2 to the Eighth Year of King Hen. 4th inclusive, in the Register of that Place, preserved in the Bodleian Library, and it will appear by several Evidences, that the Surname was variously Spell'd, as most antient Names have been. That the Parish Register Book of Burstall wherein Heyton is scituated, reaches no farther back than the Year 1558 being only 33 Years antecessent to the Date of the above mentioned Confirmation, so that no proof can be thence obtained for proving the Descent of any Younger Branches of that Antient Family of Grave Antecedent to the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, That the said Richard Graves is descended in a Right Line from and is the Heir at Law to Richard Graves Citizen and Haberdasher of London who was buried in St. Martins Ludgate in Aprill 1626, whose father came up from Beamsley in the Parish of Addingham, within the West Riding of Yorkshire, to visit his said Son in London, and dying there was buried in the same Church in Sept^r 1616 according to the Register Book of that Parish, of which later person there is still a Picture remaining in the Manor House in Northwold in Norfolk, Specifying that at the time of drawing it (being in the year 1616) he was aged 102 Years & three Months, So that consequently he must be born long before the Date of any parish Register Book and that of Addingham goes no higher than the year 1612. That he hath heard from his Father Aunts and other Relations, that his Ancestor was very nearly related to one of the same Surname, Lord Mayor of York, and that there now remaineth in his Possession an Escoccheon of the same Arms with those confirmed having a Crescent for difference, which, (according to the Tradition in the Family) was used at the Funerall of the said Citizen and Haberdasher of London, who was Father of Rich^d Graves, Esq^r, Clerk of the Peace of the County of Middx., and Benchor of Lincoln's Inn whose Arms according to S^r William Dugdale's Origines Juridiciales pag. 242 were Sett up in the West Window of the Chappell there with his Name over them being the same which had been confirmed in the 33^d Year of Queen Elizabeth; and which said Arms have been also constantly born by his Son and Heir Samuell who was Father of the said Rich^d Graves the Memorialist, upon Plate, Furniture and other Occasions, without Interruption, Denyal or Claim of any person whatsoever. Notwithstanding this Prescription of so many Generations, and though the Arms were so long since used with a Crescent, as the Distinction of a Second Branch of this Family of Grave of Heyton, Yet since for want of the Register Books at so great distance of time he cannot make a positive direct Proof interminis, from which Person of that Family his Descent is derived, and the said Rich^d Graves being therefore very desirous that for the future there may be an Alteration made in the Arms by the Addition of Cross Crosslets Or, to be used by him and the Descendants of his Father, and that the Crown in the Crest may be altered from Argent to Gules, with the Addition of a Cross Crosslet in the Beak of the Eagle, to be born by him and them hereafter, and the Posteritys of their Bodies, according to the Law of Arms. And forasmuch as his Lordship considering the Premises and also the Qualifications of the said Rich^d Graves did by Warrant under his Hand and Seal bearing Date the 22^d Day of June last Order and Direct Us to grant, assign, ratify, and Confirm unto him and the Descend^{ts} of his said Father the aforesaid Arms so varied. Now Know Yee that We the said Garter and Clarenceux in Pursuance of the Consent of the said Earl of Sussex Signified as aforesaid, and by virtue of the Letters Patents of Our Offices granted under the Great Seal, do by these presents, grant assign, ratifie and confirm unto the s^d Rich^d Graves and his Descendants and also to the other Descendants of his said Father Samuell Graves the Arms and Crest following Viz^t Gules, an Eagle displai'd Or, Beaked membred and Crowned Argent between eight Cross Crosslets of the second; and for the Crest on a wreath of the Colours a Demy Eagle crased Or, issuing out of a Ducal Coronet having a Cross Crosslet in his Beak Gules as the same is in the Margin hereof are more plainly depicted to be born and used for ever hereafter by him the said Rich^d Graves and his Descend^{ts} and also the other Descendants of Samuell Graves his said flather, with their due Differences according to the Law and Usage of Arms, without the Lett or Interruption of any person or persons w^hsoever. In witness whereof We the s^d Garter and Clarenceux Kings of Arms have to these presents subscribed our Names and affixed the Seals of our severall Offices the fourth day of July in the Second Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Second by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland King Defender of the faith &c. annoq' Dñi 1728.

STEPHEN TUCKER, Rouge Croix.

“WILLIAM DE WROTHAM, LORD WARDEEN OF THE CINQUE PORTS.”

By MRS. CHOLMELEY DERING.

Thus is headed a paper printed in the thirteenth volume of the ‘Archæologia Cantiana,’ professing to give, in connection with the pedigree of another family in Kent, the history of the de Wrothams.

It is there stated that “the various historians of Kent have all failed to give any particulars respecting the family of de Wrotham;” and the writer gives a short pedigree of de Wrotham, beginning with Geoffrey de Wrotham, living in the time of Stephen, who is said to have married Muriel de Lyd, and to have been the father of the Lord Warden. This is given on the authority of Collinson’s ‘History of Somersetshire.’

It is no wonder that various historians have all failed to give particulars of the Lord Warden’s family as they sought for it under the name of de Wrotham, a name which appears to have been assumed in the reign of Henry II or Richard I. The fact is that the de Wrothams were a branch of the Dering family, as is very clearly shown in an old pedigree, now the property of Sir Edward Cholmeley Dering, which was carefully and elaborately drawn from old family deeds and muniments in the Surrenden collection. The Derings, in early days, resided at Lyd, and this probably was the origin of the statement that Geoffrey de Wrotham married Muriel de Lyd. The de Wrothams descended from the Derings, in the following order:—

Dering, surnamed Leafget Fitz Shred, died in 1119, leaving by his wife Lesulina de Morini, two sons, Norman Fitz Dering, Sheriff of Kent in Stephen’s reign, killed at the battle of Lincoln while defending the person of that king, and Godred, styled in one deed Godred Fitz Dering and in another Fitz Leafget.

These documents are dated respectively 26 Henry I and 4 Stephen.

Godred Fitz Dering, alias Fitz Leofget, left three sons, Bosso, a Presbyter-Cardinal, Dereman Fitz Godred, and Derolf Fitz Godred. It is with Dereman Fitz Godred, as the progenitor of the Lord Warden, that we are principally concerned.

The writer of the paper in the 'Archæologia Cantiana' states that the father of the Lord Warden received from one of the Archbishops of Canterbury whom he served, a small estate called Rodenball, in Wrotham, where the Archbishops of Canterbury had a palace. This is inaccurate. It was not the father of the Lord Warden who received this estate and who served the Archbishop, but his uncle, or else his grandfather. His uncle Richard was he who first assumed the name of de Wrotham.

Norman Fitz Dering, the Sheriff of Kent before mentioned, left by his wife, the sister and heir of William de Ipres, Earl of Kent, three sons; the second of whom, Richard, a monk of Christ Church, Canterbury, when in the household of Archbishop Theobald, became acquainted, and formed a life-long friendship, with Thomas à Becket, afterwards Archbishop Becket; and what is so likely as that Richard should procure, through his friend the Archbishop, a Cardinal's hat in the third degree for his cousin Bosso Fitz Godred (who died in 1159), and also a situation of trust in the Archbishop's household for his other cousin Dereman? He is particularly described in the pedigree as holding such a situation. This Richard, the monk, was in 1174 consecrated Archbishop, and no doubt his cousin Dereman's eldest son was in his household, and doubtless to him his cousin the Archbishop gave the estate in Wrotham, for he is styled in the pedigree simply Richard de Wrotham. He had no issue. Very likely he too was a monk, though he is not so called in the pedigree. His younger brother seems to have inherited this property, as he is called William de Wrotham who was William Fitz Dereman.

This William de Wrotham had two sons; Robert, of whose issue and descendants the pedigree makes no mention (most likely from him descended the de Wrothams described in Collinson's 'History of Somerset'), and William de Wrotham, Constable of Dover Castle 7 John, and 4 Henry III, 1220; he is so described in the pedigree. He left an only daughter and heir, Hilda, married to — de Bohun.

Now the paper in the 'Archæologia Cantiana' seems to make the Constable of Dover Castle and the Archdeacon of Taunton father and son, whereas they were one and the same person; and the pedigree gives the date of death of the Constable of Dover Castle as the 4th of Henry III, and this paper makes the Archdeacon, whom he calls his son, die one year before him. But the evidence of their being the same person consists in an order of King John in the Patent Roll (p. 80), in which, on March 17th, 1208, King John tells his "lieges of the Cinque Ports" to send the muster-roll of their ships to London to William de Wrotham, Archdeacon of Taunton. How he came, as Archdeacon, to be Lieutenant and afterwards Constable of Dover Castle and Lord Warden I know not, excepting that probably, if celibacy of clergy existed in England at the time, it was but partially observed in John's reign; and thus the Archdeacon left a daughter and heir, and held secular offices; or the Archdeaconry was held by a layman by favour of the king, who had not then, I believe, submitted to the Nuncio.

Dr. Hook, in his 'Lives of the Archbishops,' following other authorities, calls Archbishop Richard a Norman by birth. This mistake probably arose from his being the son of Norman; and as a monk no surname appeared. He is simply called Richard, and his family name does not appear in any transaction.

In the same manner, his uncle Robert, Bishop of Bath and Wells, having been a monk of Lewes, no surname appears in any transaction. He is simply styled Bishop Robert. In Hyde Casson's 'Lives of the Bishops of Bath and Wells' the same, and even a greater, mistake is made about his nationality. Robert is called by birth a Norman, though by parentage a Fleming. His mother being a de Morini, they were often called Flemings. Phillipot uses the term regarding Norman.

WYMBERLEY (vol. iv, p. 6).—I have seen a bargain of sale from John Durant of Cottesmore, son and heir of William Durant deceased, of a manor called Saule's in Barrowden, and lands in North Luffenham and Morcott (all in co. Rutland), the latter in the occupation of Rowland Durant, gent., to Sir William Cecil, Knt., principal Secretary to the Queen, dated 20 January, 13 Elizabeth, on the death of Margaret, wife of Gilbert Berry, gent., and late wife of William Durant of Cottesmore deceased (he ob. 20 Elizabeth, and his widow was daughter of George Sherrard of Whissendine), for the sum of £360, and confirmed 30 May, 14 Elizabeth, by Gilbert Berry and his wife, paying one penny to Sir William Cecil, in the presence of William Berry and others. The property consisted of 1 cottages, 4 croftes, 212 acres of arable land, 6 acres 3 perches of pasture (enclosed), 13 acres 2 perches other pasture, 116 acres Leyes, 35 acres meadow, 1 acre wood, and xxs. rent. The land in Barrowden was in the occupation of Rt. Campon; and the manor is now the property of Sir William Cecil's lineal descendant, the present Marquis of Exeter. Although his name is not in the pedigree of the family in the Visitation of 1618-9, Gilbert Berry was one of the family of that name of Wissondyne, and the second husband of Elizabeth widow of Christopher Wymberley of Bitchfield, ob. 1569.

DALLAS OF BUDZET OR BUDGATE.

Sir William Dallas appears in 1286 as witness to a charter of Hugh Herock, a burgess of Elgin, granting the lands of Daldeleyth to the Bishopric of Moray. Subsequently,

William Dallas appears as a witness to a charter of Hugh Fraser of Lovat, granting certain lands to the same bishopric, in or before 1298.

And later still their descendant John Dallas occurs with others on an Assise, in 1369; to him, apparently, succeeded another

John Dallas, Lord of Dallas, who appears on an inquest on the lands of Akdrochty in 1391, but must have died soon after, as in 1395 mention is made of a John Dallas, "brother of the Lord of Dallas."

His eldest son, Archibald Dallas, appears to have executed a deed of tailze over the Lordship of Dallas, in the shire of Elgin, in favour of William Hay of Loehloy, which tailze was confirmed to his son and heir, John Hay of Loehley, by Thomas, Earl of Moray, in 1425. His only daughter and heiress,

Elizabeth Dallas, married Duncan Fraser, "a son of the family of Lovat," and in 1428, with the consent of her husband, made over her right to the Lordship of Dallas to her uncle,

John Dallas of Easterfurd, who appears as a witness in the year 1395, when he is called "Johannis de Dolas, frater domini ejusdem." In 1410 he obtained from David, 2nd Earl of Craufurd, the lands of Budzet, in the shire of Inverness, in exchange for the lands he already possessed "in the South," but failed to recover the Lordship of Dallas, the right to which had been made over to him by his niece.

William Dallas, styled of Micklebudzet and Galcantray, apparently the son and heir of this John Dallas, gave the ward and marriage of his son William to Hugh Rose of Kilravock, in the shire of Nairn, in 1485, and this son subsequently appears to have become

William Dallas of Budzet. He is mentioned in the "saising of the Quarter of Estirgeddes," in 1492, and, again, with his son and heir-apparent, William Dallas, in a precept from the Lord of Strathnairn circa 1490-1500. He occurs as surety for one of his neighbours in 1492, and as a witness in 1493. In 1494 he and others received a pardon from King James IV, for some capital offence of which there appears to be no record, and he again occurs as a witness in 1501 and in 1510. His son¹

William Dallas occurs as son and heir apparent in 1492, when he and his wife, Margaret, daughter of William, Thane of Cawdor, are mentioned in a precept from the Lord of Strathnairn. His successor¹

William Dallas of Budzet occurs in a sasine of Alexander Ogilvy, Lord of Strathnairn, of the lands of Milton, &c. in favour of Alexander Dallas, his son and heir-apparent, and Isabella Dunbar his wife, in 1525. He is again mentioned in 1533, and his eldest son William having died before him he was succeeded by his second (?) son and heir,

Alexander Dallas, who, in 1540, when he is still styled "son and heir-apparent," granted to Katherine Campbell "in her virginity" the lands of Milton, &c., to her and the heirs of their bodies, his first wife Isabella Dunbar having apparently died without issue. In 1547 he obtained a precept of Sasine from James Ogilvy, Lord of Strathnairn, and was succeeded by (probably) his son, another

Alexander Dallas of Budzet, who, in 1574, executed a charter in favour of his spouse, Margaret McIntosh, of the lands of Dallaschyle, &c. He again occurs in 1581, and in 1590 he grants to his son and heir, William Dallas, a charter of the lands of Budzetmoir, Dallaschyle, &c. This son,

William Dallas of Budzet, in 1605, granted a charter to William Dallas, his son and heir-apparent (by the late Margaret Dunbar, his spouse), of the lands of Butzetmoir, Dallaschyle, &c., to him and the heirs male of his body, whom failing, to the heirs male of the name and arms of Dallas. The said son, William Dallas of Budzet, in 1623, resigned the whole lands of Budzetmoir, Dallaschyle, &c., to John Campbell, "the Fiar" of Cawdor, for 10,000 merks, though he still occurs as of Budzet in 1636, and a -- Dallas of Budzet (the christian name is effaced in the document) signed a letter in 1650. In the same year, too, is mentioned, an Alexander Dallas of Galcantray, who would appear to be of this family, and in 1667 Mary, daughter of John Rose of Braidley, who is called relict of "Mr. John Dallas of Budzet, Dean of Ross," died. He perhaps was a descendant of the old Budzet family, and possibly from this marriage descended.

William Dallas (of Budzet), to whom we find by an inventory taken at Cawdor, in 1716, after the death of William Campbell of Cawdor, that the lands of Budzet were wadset for 10,000 merks. Shortly after this date the family is supposed to have become extinct, and the Chief-

GRANT OF ARMS TO THE FLETCHERS' COMPANY.

The following grant, the original of which is now in possession of the Fletchers' Company, is curious from its early date, 1467. Its commencement, "to all nobelesse," clearly shows that at this date arms were considered to be the evidence of nobility, a fact too much lost sight of in our time, when the vulgar only look upon peers of the realm as persons entitled to be called noble.

Hawkeslowe is merely mentioned by Noble, in his 'History of the College of Arms,' as having been Clarenceux in the reign of Edward IV. He was Bluemantle pursuivant in the reign of Henry VI, and Clarenceux in 1 Edward IV. He was drowned in the Spanish seas in 1476, and buried at St. Mary Somerset on the 7th of May in that year. His seal, which is attached to this grant, has his coat of ARMS:—Gyronny of ten, a bordure Ermine. CREST:—a lion passant gardant. The legend by which it is surrounded is broken, but I am enabled by the kindness of Arthur Larken, Esq., Porteuillis, to give it in full: s. WILLIMI HAWKESLOW ALITER CLARESEWS REGI ARMORV'.

LONDON REGISTERS (vol. iii, p. 330).—The Mr. Thomas Pilkington, of Belton, who married Mrs. Thomazin Collins, 22 October, 1663, at this church, was the same Mr. Thomas Pilkington, of Belton, Rutland, who married 22 November, 1666, Mary Smith, daughter of Rev. Barnabas Smith, Rector of North Witham. She was half sister to Sir Isaac Newton. Her mother, Hannah, daughter of James Ayscough, of Market Overton, Rutland, gent., is said to have died at Stamford, Lincoln, in 1689, but an entry in Colsterworth parish register says she was buried there 4 June, 1679, so I am inclined to think the entry (1689) in the Newton pedigree is an error. Her first husband was buried at Colsterworth, 6 October, 1642, and Isaac, his posthumous son was baptized at this church 1 January, 1642-3. She and her second husband, Barnabas Smith (who died circa 1656) were married at North Witham, 27 Jan. 1645. Her mother was Margaret, daughter of Thomas Blythe, of Stroxtton, Lincolnshire, gent. Jane Bate, of Ashby de la Zouch, co. Leicester, fourth daughter of Thomas Bate, of Ashby, gent., married George Pilkington, of Packington, co. Leicester, gent., who ob. 21 September, 1754. Mr. Pilkington was a son of Thomas Pilkington, of Belton, Rutland, by Hannah, widow of Rev. B. Smith, and mother of Sir I. Newton, see Bate pedigree, 'Mis. Gen. et Heraldica,' vol. ii, p. 491.

JUSTIN SIMPSON.

Vol. iii, p. 405, in Wilsby note, for born at St. Michael's, Stamford, read buried at.

SIR RICHARD BROWNE (vol. iii, p. 377).—By the kindness of J. R. Brown, Esq., I am able to add the following references to books from which further particulars may be gathered relative to this baronet. 'Smyth's Obituary,' Camden Soc., No. xlv, p. 83, gives the date of his death as 24th September, 1669. Richard Blome's 'History of the New Testament,' 1688, has a plate dedicated to him; see 'Notes and Queries,' 5 ser., viii, pp. 229, 517. He was also a "benefactor" to Blome's 'Britannia,' in which will be found an engraving of his arms, Argent, an a chevron between three griffins' heads as many castles of the field. Mr. B. B. Orridge, in his 'Citizens of London and their Rulers,' styles him "Merchant Taylor, and Alderman of Langbourne Ward." Ricraft, 'Survey of England's Champions,' 1647 (reprint), has a portrait of him, as "Richard Browne, Esq., Major General of Oxon, Berks, and Buckingham," with a memoir; but a foot-note of the editor confuses him with Sir Richard, father-in-law of Evelyn. There is also a portrait and memoir of him in John Vickers' 'England's Worthies,' 1647 (reprint, London, 1845). He is mentioned in Burton's 'Parliamentary Survey,' vol. iv, p. 488. And Pepys, in his 'Diary,' under date 13th June, 1665, on which day he dined with the Lord Mayor, who was very respectful to him, says that there were at table "three Sir Richard Brownes, viz.: he of the Council, a clerk, and the Alderman, and his son; and there was a little grandson, also Richard, who will hereafter be Sir Richard Browne." Mr. J. R. Scott, in his 'Memorials of the Scots of Scots Hall,' confuses Richard Browne of Great Chart, M.P. for New Romney, with Sir Richard the Lord Mayor, and also with Sir Richard Browne, father-in-law of Evelyn the Diarist, pp. xxii, 212.

A sheet of devices, &c., of Parliament officers, in possession of J. R. Brown, Esq., gives that borne on his banner, a wreath of laurel and a death's head placed side by side, with "ONE OF THESE" inscribed between them. He is described as "Cap. Brown one of y^e city Capt. and Captain of a Troop of Horse and Colonel of a regiment of Dragoons, 1642."

An account, which escaped my attention when I wrote before, of this title will be found in Wotton's 'Baronets,' vol. ii, p. 97. Wotton says that Sir John Browne, 4th baronet, was the uncle, not the brother, of Sir Richard, the 3rd, and that he married a daughter of Alderman Hussey, and died in 1701, leaving a numerous issue (not mentioned by name), of which the eldest son was Sir Thomas Browne (5th baronet), a bachelor in 1727, the date of Wotton's book.

It should also be added that Sir Richard, the 1st baronet, had a son Moses, who died s.p., and a daughter, wife of Douglas, M.D., who are not mentioned in my former notice.

I have looked for the will of Sir John, but without success. The existence of his son Sir Thomas, recognised as baronet in 1729, and the statement that he had "numerous issue" render it quite possible that the title is still dormant. I therefore close this note with a ?

EDITOR 'GENEALOGIST.'

FAMILY OF LISCOMBE.—I should be glad if any reader of the 'Genealogist' could supply me with information regarding the name of Liscombe, mentioned on page 402, vol. iii. Though Lipscombe occurs frequently in genealogical works, I have failed to find any reference to the other spelling. I suppose that the family of Price, in which it was used as a christian name, must have married the heiress of a family of that name.

JAMES DALLAS.

CUSACK FAMILY.—In the late Sir William R. Wilde's 'Beauties of the Boyne and Blackwater,' p. 158 (second ed., Dublin, 1850), mention is made of a MS., entitled 'An Historical Memoir and Genealogy of the ancient and illustrious House of Cusack, of the Kingdom of Ireland,' then in the possession of Mr. H. T. Cusack. It is written in French, and "appears to have been compiled by the Chevalier O'Gorman, in the year 1767." Has it, in whole or in part, appeared in print? It is referred to by Wilde in connection with Rathaldron Castle, co. Meath; and it, doubtless, contains many curious particulars. In the north aisle of the Abbey Church, Bath, there is a small tablet with the following inscription:—"Jacent hic ossa Roberti Cusacke de Atheare, in comitatu Dubliniensi, Armigeri. Obiit 7 Idus Octob., Anno Salutis 1707."

B. H. B.

SWENNERTON.—John "Swennerton" (Swynnerton), of Wolstanton in co. Stafford, mentions in his will, proved in 1547, his "cosens" Thomas Bellott of Gresford, gentleman, and "Thomas Swinnerton of Madeley" and Butterton. Can anyone kindly tell me how the relationship between these Swynnertons and the Bellotts arose?

HISTORY OF THE WRAYS OF GLENTWORTH, 1523-1852. By CHARLES DALTON. Vol. I. London: Chapman and Hall, 1880. Svo.

MR. DALTON has undertaken to write the family history of the Wrays in a popular and unconventional manner, and to illustrate the dry details of their descent with extracts from the history of the times in which they flourished. The reader who looks at his book from a genealogist's point of view alone will be, therefore, disappointed if he expects to find those minute details of positive or circumstantial evidence which, to our mind, render a book of pedigree delightful and entertaining.

Mr. Dalton has collected from various printed sources, which he very properly refers to in the margin, most of the facts and anecdotes which serve to make up his book. Scissors and paste appear to have had more charm for him than original and painstaking research.

The founder of the family, Sir Christopher Wray, Lord Chief Justice, is its most remarkable member. He was the son of Thomas Wray of Richmond, co. York, by Joan, daughter and coheir of Robert Jackson of Gatonby. Four generations before Thomas are given in the pedigree, but no attempt has been made to prove whether they are true or false. Sir Christopher had a grant of Arms in 1587, but it is not given. His will is dated 1589, but Mr. Dalton does not appear to have taken the trouble to look at it, and we only learn that such a document exists from references to Betham and Collins. Surely an examination of the Richmond wills now at Somerset House would have thrown some further light on the earlier descents of the Wrays. Perhaps we ought not to find fault with the author for not giving more particulars of the early Wrays, as we are told in the preface that a few months ago he knew little or nothing about the Wrays, except that he was descended from them through his great-grandmother. On the other hand some people will think that he has been in too great a hurry to commit the little he does know to the press.

Sir Christopher was succeeded by his son Sir William, M.P. for Grimsby, who was created a Baronet in 1611; and he by his son Sir John, who married Grisell, daughter of Sir Hugh Bethell of Ellerton, "county Yorkshire."

Sir William Wray was distinguished for his two good marriages; his son Sir John for his puritanical principles. Sir Christopher Wray, eldest son of Sir William by his second marriage, was Parliamentary Lord High Admiral of England in 1645.

Mr. Dalton has devoted several chapters in his volume to accounts of families who inter-married with the Wrays; the Drury's of Hawsted, Staffords of Blatherwick, Foljambes of Hardwicke, and Irbys of Boston, are all noticed, and the brief details given of them make us wish that he had told us more of their history. Our limited space prevents our giving some of the anecdotes and incidents mentioned in the "History of the Wrays;" it is sufficient to say that they are many and varied, and that the general reader will gain both amusement and instruction by perusing it; we beg him not to skip the preface which is worth reading, and contains much sound common sense. When Mr. Dalton's second volume appears, it is to be hoped that he will add to it an appendix of illustrative documents, such as grants of arms, original wills, deeds, and extracts from registers, and thus make it, what it should be, a book of reference for the genealogist, as well as what it already is, a very entertaining miscellany of biographical anecdotes.

THE ANTIQUARY, A MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO THE STUDY OF THE PAST,
 Edited by EDWARD WALFORD, M.A. London: ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster Row. Price 1s.

We have received Parts 1 and 3 of this new magazine, and hail its birth with pleasure, as it seems calculated to supply a want, doubtless long felt, by many people generally interested in the history of the past, though unbound to any particular branch of antiquarian research. The Antiquary aims at being general and popular, rather than the representative of any particular school of Dry-as-dusts. Mr. Seton's paper on "Old Parochial Registers," and Mr. Beaumont's on the "Ancient Earldom of Mar," are of especial value to those interested in matters genealogical. The best feature in the work is the column devoted to "Antiquarian News," which appears to have been judiciously and carefully collected, and supplies a want long felt. "The Antiquary Exchange" is also a very useful idea. We wish both Editor and Publisher a good circulation, and its consequence, a clean bill of healthy profits.

IRISH PEDIGREES; OR THE ORIGIN AND STEM OF THE IRISH NATION.
 By JOHN O'HART. Dublin: M'GLASIAN and GILL. London:
 WHITTAKER & Co., etc. First and second series, 2 vols. sm. 8vo.

Mr. O'Hart has attempted in these little volumes to present his readers with—to use the lines of Longfellow—

"The history of the world, Brought down from Genesis to the Day of Judgment"— so far at all events as Ireland is concerned.

For the genealogies set forth our author is indebted to O'Clery's "Irish Genealogies," so called because compiled by Michael O'Clery, who was the chief author of the "Annals of the Kingdom of Ireland, by the Four Masters." "In that priceless work" he "traced the origin and stem of the Irish Nation, the ancestry of the ancient Irish families in Ireland, the pedigrees of the more leading families among them down to the beginning of the seventeenth century, and the Royal Stem of Ireland from which our gracious Queen derives her lineal descent."

Mr. O'Hart's labours are most appropriately dedicated to Sir Bernard Burke.

Commencing with the assertion that, "Adam was the first man," some curious particulars are given of the early settlers in Ireland. Ceasair founded a colony there before the flood; Bartholinus was the first planter after Milesius of Spain, father of Heber and Heremon the first kings of Ireland, was contemporary with King Solomon. He bore three lions in his shield, an early instance of the use of coat armour, the authenticity of which we must leave Ulster and the learned author of the "Antiquities of Heraldry" to demonstrate further before we can accept it without question.

The descent of Queen Victoria from Adam, through the ancient Irish monarchs, is given in the introduction. Then follow the stem of the Irish Nation from Adam to Milesius and from Milesius to Florence Mac Carthy Mor, i.e., the pedigree of the MacCarthy family; pedigrees of O'Brien, O'Sullivan, O'Carroll, O'Farrell, Guinness, O'Conor, O'Moore, O'Hart, O'Toole, MacMahon, Burke, Fitzgerald, and many more. The article on "Ancient Irish names and adfixes" at p. 16 of the introduction is full of interest. We question however the assertion that the name Montague is derived from MacTague, preferring to derive it from the town of Montagu in Normandy, whence Drogo de Monte-acuto, the great Domesday tenant, is said to have come. The latter half of the first volume has a well digested account of the chief families of Ireland arranged under the four Provinces.

The second volume, or more properly speaking series, is perhaps more interesting to genealogists than the first, as it gives the pedigrees of a great number of families of the present time. The appendix to this volume is full of accounts of various matters of much interest, we can only mention the headings of a few of them, Ancient Irish Literature, Bardic Families, Brass money, Curragh of Kildare, English Pale, Fairies, Hereditary Officers, Monasteries, Witchcraft. The preface and dedication of this volume also contain much worth reading.

To give a detailed account of the contents of Mr. O'Hart's volumes would occupy more pages than we are able to devote to notices of books. Generally it may be said of them that they are a resumé of Irish genealogies in a concise and readable form, and will be found a most useful text book by those who wish to investigate more thoroughly than he pretends to do, the pedigrees of both the ancient septa of, and modern settlers in, Ireland. To each volume is added a capital index. So far as the materials which Mr. O'Hart has had the use of have been handled, they appear to have been well used and made the most of. We close his book with greater regret than is usually felt in coming to the end of an entertaining and instructive volume, a regret the more intense because after all the labour expended upon them, these pedigrees are only traditional, there neither is, nor can be, any documentary evidence by which their truth can be substantiated, or their falsehood discovered. All, therefore, that can be said is, that, like the existence of Adam as the founder of the human family with whom they begin, they must be taken as matters of FAITH and not of FACT.

MARRIAGE REGISTERS FROM THE PARISH BOOK OF ST. MARY'S CHURCH IN WHITTLESEY, 1662-1672. Copied from the Original and Published by JAMES COLEMAN, 1880, 8vo.

Mr. Coleman, a bookseller well-known to our readers for the varied and interesting collections of old deeds and manuscripts he monthly offers to their notice, has had the good fortune to acquire a portion of the original register of marriages of St. Mary, Whittlesey. He has printed all of them which he has been able to decipher, and will supply the same for the small sum of eighteen pence.

He intends to "present the original book, so that certified copies can be got from the minister."

This little book is well printed, and we commend it to the notice of our readers as a small but valuable addition to their collections of Parish Registers.

DE BRAOSE FAMILY.

By DUDLEY G. CARY ELWES, F.S.A.

CHAPTER I.

WILLIAM DE BRAOSE,  AGNES dau. of WALDRON
circa 1040—1060 DE ST. CLARE

WILLIAM DE BRAOSE was a Norman Baron, and if we may judge from the large grants of lands that he received from the Conqueror after the Conquest, must have been one of his most favoured companions, for at the time of the Domesday Survey¹ he had 28 manors in Sussex, 35 in Surrey, 47 in Hampshire, 61 in Berkshire, 72 in Wiltshire, and 82 in Dorsetshire. He made Bramber Castle, in Sussex, his head-quarters, and was, no doubt, lord of the whole of the Rape of Bramber, in that county. According to 'Brydges' Collins,' v. 46, his wife was Agnes, daughter of Waldron de St. Clare, by whom he had a son Philip, of whom hereafter; of himself much is not easy to be ascertained; he was a great benefactor² to the Abbey of St. Florence at Saumur, to which, in 1075, he gave the churches of St. Peter at Sele, and St. Nicholas at Bramber, with others, in the county of Sussex. From an ancient charter,³ in the Record Office, which, unfortunately, is not dated—but from the dates of the various bishops who appear as witnesses, it must have been between the years 1086 and 1089—commencing with a note in Anglo-Saxon, to the effect that King Edward gave lands at Stæningan (Steyning) to the Monastery of Feseamp, it appears, that there was a dispute between this William and the king as to the proper division of a certain wood called Hamoda; it is headed "Concerning the invasions which William de Braose made in the matters of Holy Trinity," it was pleaded at "La Choche," the manor of William Dou, William, the king, holding the court and plea on one Lord's Day from morning till evening, there being present his sons and all his barons; the result of which appeal or trial was that the King commanded a hedge to be made through the middle of the wood, and the land in which the villeins dwelled and which appertains to the wood, and the King's portion was to remain to him and William's to him. There was a dispute also from the evidence of this charter about two churches, for it further says that, "Concerning the sepulture of Saint Cuthman this was established, that it should remain quit, and by the King's command the bodies of the dead which at the church of William (? Bramber Church) were buried, were dug out by the men of the same William, and carried back to the church of St. Cuthman (? Steyning Church), to wit, to lawful sepulture; and Herbert, the Dean (? a friend or vassal of William de Braose's), brought back the monies which he had received from the sepultures, from waits, from bell-ringing, and from everything that is taken from the dead; and first he caused a relative of his to take oath that he had not had more.¹ The next part of the charter refers to land that William had taken unjustly from Holy Trinity, at "Udicam," [? Odiham] for his park—which park was ordered to be destroyed, and was destroyed, the land remained quit; the warren which William had made in the land of Holy Trinity was adjudged to be, and was, destroyed; of the toll which William took of the men of Holy Trinity at his bridge, it was adjudged that it ought not to be taken, for in the time of King Edward it was never given, and by the King's command, whatever had been taken was restored, the toll-taker [telonario] taking oath that he had not received more. Concerning the ships which ascend to the port [portum] of Saint Cuthman [Steyning], it was adjudged that they ought to be quit for two-pence ascending and descending, unless they should make another market at William's castle. As to the way which William had made in the land of Holy Trinity, it was adjudged that it ought to be, and it was, destroyed; as to the trench which he had made for the conduct of water of the castle, it was adjudged that it ought to be, and it was, filled up, and the land remained quit; as to the marsh, it was decreed that it ought to be quit as far as the hill in circuit and the salt-pans. Concerning the eighteen gardens, it was adjudged that they be quit of Holy Trinity. Concerning the toll which is taken throughout the whole week, it was adjudged that the whole be the Saints, but on Saturday a moiety be Williams. All these things remained quit and free to the church of Fescamp. Concerning the invasions of all which things, William gave a surety [vadium] into the King's hand, into his mercy."

The foregoing charter is most interesting with regard to the topography of this part of Sussex, we learn from it that ships were in the habit of going up inland further than the Castle of Bramber itself, and leads up to the query whether this might not have been the site of the "Portus Adurni" of the Romans, instead of as usually asserted Portislade¹ The ancient bridge, which was in 1839 discovered at Bramber two feet below the surface of the land, and of which the Rev. Edward Turner gave a most interesting account in S.A.C., ii, 63, may have been part of the way mentioned in the foregoing charter, as ordered "to be and being destroyed."

² At what time this William died is difficult to determine. In Normandy he was Lord of the Honour of Braose or Brieuze, a castle situated within two leagues of Falaise, where William the Conqueror was born, in the department of Calvados, about 42 leagues from Paris and ten leagues from Caen; this leads to the question of whether the great Bruce family are descended from this house or not. I have long ago, in my own mind, come to the conclusion that they are not one and the same family, for in all the old documents I have come across relating to the de Braose family I have found the name nearly always spelt so as to make the pronunciation Brieuze, i.e., long and not short as Bruce; besides, though Burke, in his confused account of the Roll of Battle Abbey under Brutz, says "that the family assumed its name from the castle of La Brutica, 17 miles from Valognes, and the youngest son, Robert de Brutz, or in English, Bruce, together with William, his son, followed the standard of William the Conqueror into England, where Robert is said to have died very shortly after the battle of Hastings. William, his son, had the castle of Brembre in Sussex, and his descendants, for several generations, held rank as barons of the realm." Yet, in this same work, if we turn to Braious, we find no mention of the foregoing, but simply that "One of the distinguished commanders in the army of the Conqueror was William de Braose, a noble Norman, who held in his native Duchy the Honour of Braose, near Falaise;" he however avoids mentioning that this was the William de Braose who made Bramber Castle his head-quarters, a fact of which there is no doubt, and that he was the Lord of Bramber rape in Sussex, and not, as Burke states, the William Brutz, whose grandfather was Lord of la Brucee Castle near Valognes, in the department of Manche considerably to the N.W. of Falaise, and who was no doubt the progenitor of the Bruce family of Scotland.

It is probable that this William did not long survive the date of the foregoing charter, the events of which, as I have shown, p. 133, must have taken place between the years 1086 and 1089.

² In 1082 Will. de Braiose was a witness to a charter of William I. and Matilda, his wife, granting Nailsworth, in Gloucestershire, to the Abbey of the Holy Trinity at Caen. De Antiq. Leg. Preface, cxxi.

Rape of Bramber, p. 224, refers to one of them as containing the recital of William de Braose's grant to the Priory of Sele in Beeding parish, co. Sussex; this Priory was undoubtedly founded by this family, as the grants made by all the members of it in rotation prove.

CHAPTER II.

PHILIP DE BRAOSE, SON OF ANOR dau. of JUDAEL of WILLIAM and AGNES. de TOTNES.
See p. 133

William was succeeded by his son PHILIP de BRAOSE who confirmed his father's grants to different Monasteries. It is not unlikely that he was born in 1075, in which year his father dedicated the churches of the Martyrs Gervase and Prothasius of Brieuze, St. Peter at Sele, and St. Nicholas at Bramber to St. Florence.¹ Concerning him, I have not found many details. In 9 Will. II, 1095-6 (Dug: Bar: i, 14), he is said to have adhered to the King against Robert Curthose. In 1103 (Dug: Mon: vii, 1083) (presente Henrico gloriose Anglorum Rege astantibus multis baronibus), he concluded an agreement with William, Abbot of Fescamp, among those present on behalf of Philip was his brother-in-law, Robert. From the same charter roll² already quoted (ante p. 133), is a confirmation of his father's grant. The date of this is not easy to be decided, beyond the fact that it was during the bishopric of Ralph of Chichester, who was bishop from 1091 until 1125, and that it must have been in or before 1103 as Robert, Earl of Mellent, who after that date became Earl of Leicester, was a witness to it under the former title. It was made at Folcardi Montem (? Mountfoucard), and the pleadings were in the court of King William the younger, between the monks of Salmur and this Philip de Braiosa. These monks claimed amongst other things from Philip and the church of Fescamp, the parish which appertains to Saint Cuthman of the castle of Staninges of Beddinges and of Bedelingheton. William, the third abbot, asserting this, took part in the pleading. And there Robert, the Earl of Mellent, rendered to the Abbot and Monks his testimony that [as to] the whole parish of Saint Cuthman it had been discussed [denarrata] in the court of King William the elder, to have to the church of Fescamp without the claim of any man, and because neither Philip nor the monks of Salmur, who were present denied but conceded this, it was agreed and adjudged that whatsoever the Monks of Salmur had received since the king's death, both in tithes, sepultures, offerings and all other things which appertain to the church of St. Cuthman, they should restore to the church of Fescamp; but as this was delayed, the king sent letters sealed to his justiciaries of England, to wit, Ralph, Bishop of Chichester, Ragnulf the chaplain, Hamo the Sewer (dapiferum), and Urso de Abetot, in which he commanded that they should cause the church of Holy Trinity to have the whole parish of Saint Cuthman, and the tithes and bodies and all customs as well of the living as of the dead, as they appertained to the aforesaid church of Saint Cuthman, before William de Braiosa had the Castle of Brembre; and whatsoever of the above customs the Monks of Salmur had taken, to be restored.¹

At Whitsuntide, 1110, Hen. I. deprived, at his Court at New Windsor, of their estates those who had been traitors to him, viz.—Philip de Braiose, William Malet, and William Bainard; he, however, in 1112, restored his estates to Philip (Annales de Waverleia, A° 1110-1112). From charters, it appears that Philip went to Jerusalem,² and it is not certain that he did not die there. I have not been able to discover the date of his death. His wife was Aanor,¹ daughter and co-heir of Judhel de Totnais¹ (Totnes was the castle of Judicael, son of Alured y^c giant, y^c keep of which still commands from its lofty mound y^c winding stream of y^c Dart, Quarterly Review, cex, 439), the possessor of the baronies of Totnes and Barnstaple; for some reason or another William Rufus expelled this Judhel and gave his lands to Roger de Nonant, or Novant, this, subsequently, was the cause of vast litigation between the descendants of the de Braoses and those of the Nonants. Alured of Totnes was baron of Barnstaple, and in 12 Will. II, his son Johel² founded a Priory there.³ The other daughter and coheir of this Johel or Judhel married a Tracy. Philip de Braose, from his frequent journeys to Jerusalem, was possibly a friend of Robert Curthose, Henry 1st eldest brother, after his death, whenever that took place, he was succeeded by his eldest son WILLIAM DE BRAOSE, who, in most accounts of the family that I have seen, is confused with his son, another William de Braose.

On the part of Holy Trinity there were William the abbot, Hugh the prior, Roger Baiguart, Rahere, Philip de Braiosa, Fulbert the archdeacon, Roger son of Gerolt, Geoffrey Martel, William Grevet, Ingelrand, Richard de la Merc, and many others.

From same reference, as given at end of Chapter I, p. 135, concerning Sele Priory, we find that this Philip confirmed his father's grant to the said Priory, and that a seal of white wax was attached to his confirmation, of which unfortunately little being left, an engraving is given at p. 173 of 'Cartwright's Rape of Bramber.'

WILLIAM DE BRAOSE = BERTA, dau. of MILO
Earl of Hereford.

There is little doubt that this William was the Sheriff of Herefordshire mentioned in Foss's *Judges of England*¹ in 1174-5, and there confounded with his son who was not Sheriff of Herefordshire until about twenty years later, 1193; and to this one should be attributed some of the cruelties that are generally credited to his son, such as murdering Sitfylt ap Dynswald and his son Geoffrey¹ after inviting them to a feast at his Castle of Bergavenny, and subsequently murdering another son of Sitfylt, Cadwallader, before his mother's face. He gave the King 1,000 marks of silver for part of the honour of Barnstaple,² his right from his grandfather Johel de Totenais, and, in 10 Hen. II. [1164], was one of the subscribers to the constitutions of Clarendon. The date of this William's death is very uncertain, it was probably his son William who, in 33 Hen. II [1187], paid £28 scutage for lands in Milo was Sheriff of Staffordshire and Gloucestershire, and also justice itinerant for these counties. His mother was Emma, sister to Hameline de Balun, a powerful noble, and one of the companions of William the Conqueror on his invasion. At first, on Henry 1st death, he concurred in placing Stephen on the throne, who by charter confirmed all his lands to him, styling him 'sicut baroni et justiciario meo,' before long however, he forsook the King's party and joined the Empress Matilda, to whom he remained faithful to the end of his life. To return to William de Braose, he had by his wife Bertha a son and successor another WILLIAM DE BRAOSE. He confirmed his father's and grandfather's grants to Sele Priory in a deed to which were witnesses Sefrid, Bishop of Chichester, and many others. From these witnesses we gather that the date of confirmation was between 1125 and 1145, it could not be later. On February 6th 1144, another confirmation of the three foregoing grants was made by Sefrid, Bishop of Chichester, at Amberley.

THE FAMILY OF WHITEFOORD.

The family of Whitefoord (Whiteford, or Whytford) was originally "of that ilk," a place on the river Cart, about three miles above the town of Paisley, in Renfrewshire.

The early history of the family is given in Crawford's 'Renfrewshire,' p. 57, on the authority of a book referred to as 'The Genealogy of Whitefoord of that ilk by the accurate and judicious antiquary Mr. William Hamilton of Wishaw.' The original grant of 1263 is recited, and a sketch of the family given up to the date of Crawford's History (1710). It is stated there and at page 310 that the lands of Whitefoord had been sold to the Earl of Dundonald, and by him feued out in parcels about 1670.

Crawford remarks that the "principal branch of this ancient family is Whitefoord of Blaquhan in Carriek (Ayrshire) who descended from it several ages ago. Sir Adam Whitefoord is now (1710) of Blaquhan, Baronet . . . Bryce Whitefoord of Dindaff is brother german to Sir Adam." The subsequent history of the Whitefoords of Blaquhan is obscure, the notice by Burke in his 'Extinct Baronetage' (p. 638) being meagre in the extreme. Blaquhan is understood to be the same place as Blairquhan, now the seat of Sir Edward Hunter Blair, Bt.

I have collected the following information about the family from various sources.

The Blaquhan baronetcy dates from 1701, and was conferred on Sir Adam Whitefoord 30th December of that year. Sir Adam married about 1715, the Hon. Margaret Cathcart, only daughter of Alan 7th Baron Cathcart, and the Hon. Elizabeth Dalrymple his wife, daughter of the first Viscount Stair. Lady Whitefoord died in 1742, and Sir Adam before 1734, leaving several sons, the order of whose birth is uncertain ;

- (1) James, who in 1734 was gazetted as "Sir James W. Bt. to be a Capt. in Cadogan's Regt." I apprehend that this is a misprint for Sir John, and that there was no Sir James Whitefoord, and that the Gazette refers to:—
- (2) John, of whom after.
- (3) Charles, who was Sir Adam's "third son." He married and had a son Caleb, born in Edinburgh in 1734, who will be referred to hereafter. In July 1740 he was gazetted as A.D.C. to his uncle, General Lord Cathcart, in the "intended expedition" to America. He was in 1751 gazetted from half-pay to a cavalry regiment in Ireland, and died in Galway in 1753. Besides Caleb Whitefoord, Col. Charles left a daughter, Mrs. Smith.
- (4) Hew, appointed an ensign in Cathcart's foot in 1731, seems to have died in 1741 when on service in the field against Carthage, from "the inclemency of the climate."
- (5) Alan (printed also Allen or Alban) was appointed in 1733 Receiver General of the land tax for Scotland, and died in 1766.

Sir Adam was (eventually) succeeded by his son Sir John Whitefoord, who was gazetted as a Major in 1743, as a Colonel in 1750, and as a Lieutenant General in 1761. He is termed Sir John¹ Whitefoord of Whitefoord, Bt. I have not ascertained the name of his wife. He died between February 1763 and October 1764. I have noticed only one son, his successor, Sir John Whitefoord, Bt., who was married in 1761 (as Captain Whitefoord of the Royal Fusiliers) to Miss Cartwright, one of the coheiresses of the family of Cartwright of Ossington, in Nottinghamshire. In February 1763 he was gazetted to be a Major in the 11th Regiment; and in announcing the birth of a son in October 1764 he is styled Sir John Whitefoord, Bt. I notice the following children:—

- (1) John, "eldest son," died on board the Frigate "Pomona," off St. Thomas, 9th October 1788.
- (2) James of Dindaff died at Beestow, near Nottingham, 30th August 1795.
- (3) Charles, "3rd son," died at Edinburgh 6th June 1787.
- (4) Mary Anne, "eldest daughter," married in 1803 to Henry Kerr Cranstoun, nephew of the 5th Baron Cranstoun. She was his second wife.
- (5) Alice Lucy, "2nd daughter," married on the 5th December

¹ See Paterson's 'History of Ayr,' second edition, ii, 469.

1795, at Wollaton, near Nottingham, the seat of Lord Middleton, to the Hon. Henry Sedley, who was eldest son (by his 2nd wife, Martha Harecourt) of the 1st Baron Vernon. He had taken the name of Sedley in consequence of his previous marriage with Elizabeth Rebecca Anne, only child of Sir Charles Sedley, Bt., of Southfleet (Sir Charles died 1778; his daughter married Mr. Vernon in 1779, and died 1793). Mr. Henry Sedley-Vernon succeeded his half-brother in 1813 as 3rd Baron Vernon. Alice Luey, Lady Vernon, died in 1827, leaving two sons, whose line seems to have failed, the present Lord Vernon being descended from the first marriage with Sir Charles Sedley's daughter. Lord Middleton was uncle by marriage of Alice Luey Whitefoord, having married Dorothy Cartwright, another of the Ossington co-heiresses. [The others were Jane, Lady Legard, great grandmother of the present Sir Charles Legard, and Mary, wife of Sir Charles Buck, the last Baronet of Hamby.]

- (6) Henrietta, 3rd daughter, married 8th June 1797 to David Kennedy of Kirkmichael.
- (7) Anne, 4th daughter, died unmarried at Kirkmichael on the 23rd February 1805.
- (8) Jane, "youngest daughter," married on the 8th July 1805 to Col. Francis Cunningham, youngest son of Sir William Augustus Cunningham, Bt., of Milneraig. Col. Francis died on the 19th September, 1816, and his widow died on the same date in the following year.

Sir John Whitefoord is the last baronet of the line of whom I find any notice. I have not ascertained the date of his death; as he was made a major in 1763 he must have been about seventy-five at the date of his youngest daughter's marriage.

In vol. xciii of the 'Gentleman's Magazine' reference is made to a Sir George Whiteford, foreman of the Dublin Grand Jury, as having been examined before a Commons Committee on the 7th May 1825. It does not appear that this person was a baronet, or that he belonged to the family before us.

Failing male issue of Sir John Whitefoord, the representation of the family would, at his decease, have apparently devolved on Caleb Whitefoord, mentioned above, or his representatives. This Caleb was a remarkable character, and numerous notices of him appear in the 'Gentleman's Magazine,' and other papers of the time. He was born as above stated in 1734, and was a wine merchant in London, where he married Miss Sidney in 1800, and died in 1810, leaving four children. I have found no trace of the after history of these children.

Ensign Whitford of the 15th Regiment was wounded in one of the Canadian actions in 1814, as mentioned in General

Prevost's despatches, and Capt. J. R. Whiteford of the 15th Hussars was severely wounded at Waterloo. In 1820 he was promoted to Major, and in 1822 he seems to have left the service or died.

In 1827 the Rev. George Whitefoord, Rector of Westerfield, in Suffolk, married Arabella, 2nd daughter of George Wyndham of Cromer.

I have no other accurate information bearing on the recent history of the family.

Sir Hew Whitefoord Dalrymple, of High Mark, who was created a baronet in 1815, did not belong to this family. His father, Capt. John Dalrymple, was first cousin of Miss Cathcart, Sir Adam Whitefoord's wife, and seems to have named his son after Lady Whitefoord's son Hew, who died on service in 1741, about the date of Sir H. W. Dalrymple's birth. The High Mark baronetcy became extinct a few years ago on the death of General Sir Adolphus John Dalrymple, the 2nd baronet.

The family of Whiteford of Thornhill, in Devon, is mentioned in Burke's 'History of the Landed Gentry,' but no pedigree is given. The arms (but not the crest and motto) are not very different from those borne by the Whitefoords of Whitefoord, which are thus described by Crawford.

COAT—Argent, a bend cotised Sable, a garb in chief of the last.

BENNETT OF HEXWORTHY, IN THE PARISH OF LAWHITTON, AND COUNTY OF CORNWALL.

Compiled by the Rev. EDWARD KING, B.A., F.S.A. Scot., F.R. Hist. Soc.

Being in no way connected with the family which forms the subject of this brief memoir, I perhaps ought to apologise for publishing it. My excuse is this. Finding that several of the monumental inscriptions of the Bennetts, following the fate of others of their number, were fast becoming illegible, from exposure to the weather and the broken state of the slabs themselves, I thought it worth while to preserve some notice of that which, at no distant day, might be entirely lost.

To render this memoir more complete I have added extracts from the very imperfect Parochial Registers of Lawhitton. From these and the inscriptions, together with additions from the Herald's Visitations in the Harleian MSS., and other trustworthy sources,¹ I have drawn out the accompanying descent of this, now extinct, family. Though it comprises but seven generations, it will doubtless be interesting to some who may perhaps be able to develop it to fairer proportions.

The first of this family in Devon and Cornwall of whom I find notice is "Thomas Bennett, descended from an ancient Sussex family of that name," and great great grandson of Thomas Bennett, who in 1437 married Dorotheie, daughter of Thomas Houghton of Surrey. This first mentioned—

- I. Thomas Bennett, according to the Herald's Visitation of Essex in 1612 and Cornwall in 1620, married ..., dau. and coheirress of ... Bradbridge, near Chichester, and sister and coheirress of William Bradbridge, who was Bishop of Exeter from 18th March, 1570, to 27th July, 1578. This, no doubt, was the reason of their settling in Lawhitton, for the bishops of Exeter were lords of the manor, and had a residence there from an early period till a comparatively recent date.

By the bishop's sister he had four sons:—

1. Ellis Bennett, of Exeter, who married and had issue. This I take to be the "Ellis Bennett, Burgess of Tiverton" in 1620.
2. Robert Bennett, for whom see below.
3. William Bennett, of London, had issue.
4. Richard Bennett, who was a draper in St. Paul's Church-yard. He married Mary, dau. of — "Lumley, of London, Gent." [ARMS.—Or. a chief Gu.] and had issue:—

Benedict, Cuthbert, Mary, Joan, Jane, and	}	All died young.
---	---	-----------------

Richard Bennett, of Tiptree, co. Essex, who m. Lettis, dau. of Sir John Higham, of Barrow Hall, Suffolk, by whom he had two daurs., coheirresses, but both dying without issue terminated this branch of the family.

I don't find when this Thomas died. He was succeeded by

II. Robert Bennett, of Lawhitton, his second son, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Couch, of Lawhitton. [ARMS.—Or. two pales Gu., a canton, Sable.] By her he had three children:—

1. Richard, eldest son and heir.
2. William, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Huckmore, of Buckland-Baron, by whom he had issue.
3. Elizabeth, m. Thomas Nichol of Lezant.

This Robert died in 1607, and was succeeded by his eldest son:—

III. Richard Bennett, of Hexworthy, in Lawhitton. He was a Counsellor at Law, and m. Mary, daughter of Oliver Cloberie, of Bradstone, co. Devon. [Arms.—Arg. a chev. between three bats displayed, Sa.] She was buried at Lawhitton Dec. 17 1658. By her he had at least three sons and two daughters:—

1. Robert, son and heir, b. 1605.
2. William, b. 1612.
3. Oliver, b. 1614.
4. Mary, b. 1615.
5. Ann, b. 1616.

He died at Lawhitton in 1619, and is buried there (See Epitaphs) being succeeded by his eldest son:—

IV. Robert Bennett, of Hexworthy, "some & heyr, æt. 15" at the Heralds' Visitation in 1620. He was a rigid puritan, and a colonel in the Parliamentary Army. Tonkin says, "When the crown lands were put up for sale, during the Commonwealth, Colonel Bennett purchased the fee. But at the Restoration the Bennetts reverted to their former position as Lessees."¹ He seems also to have "bought Launceston Castle and Park," which were claimed by the Crown at the Restoration. He was M.P. for Launceston in 1652, under Oliver Cromwell, and again under his son Richard. "He beautified (?) the Church at Lawhitton,"² and presented the pulpit, dated 1605, and the oldest Register book remaining, inscribed

"Ex dono Roberti Bennett, armigeri 1638."

He was twice married, 1st to — dau. and heiress of — Mules of Hohnston, co. Devon [Arms.—Arg. two bars Gu. and in chief three torteaux.] I don't think he had any issue by her. He m. 2ndly Ann, dau. of — Mohun of — [Arms.—Or. a cross engrailed, Sable, surmounted by a bend Gules]: by her, who died in 1693, he had five sons and three daughters:—

1. Robert, born June 1647, bur. Jan. 13th 1650.
2. Richard, b. June 2nd 1648, bur. Aug. 1st 1650.
3. William, b. July 6th 1650, of whom see below.
4. Robert, b. Dec. 24th 1652. Query, was this Robert B. of Hohnston?
5. Stephen, b. —, bur. Jan. 20th 1660.
6. Mary, b. May 20th 1654, bur. July 9th 1656.
7. Elizabeth, b. May 27th 1656, m. at Lawhitton, æt. 30, 1677, Thomas Johnson.
8. Hannah, b. July 25th 1658.

Colonel Bennett dying at the age of 73 years, was buried at Lawhitton July 7th 1683, and was succeeded by his third, but eldest surviving son:—

V. William Bennett, b. July 6th 1650. I can find nothing more about this William than that he married Dorothy —, who died 1699, and by her had issue:—

1. Edward Bennett.

As the Registers are imperfect from 1681-1723, it is uncertain what other issue he had. He died in 1703, and was succeeded by his son:—

VI. Edward Bennett, of Hexworthy, b. circa 1680. He was twice married, 1st to Gertrude, dau. of Sir R. Moyle, of Bake [Arms.—Gu. a mule passant Arg.] By her he had a son and two daughters:—

1. William, died 1706.
2. Dorothy, m. at Lawhitton, Aug. 10th 1727, to Robert Bennett of Holmston. She died Oct. 10th, 1736, aged 34, and is buried in Exeter Cathedral.
3. Thomasin, mar. at Lawhitton, Nov. 19th 1731, to Joshua Thomas.

He married 2ndly, Honour, dau. of Richard Coffin, of Portlege, co. Devon, Esq. [Arms.—Az. semée of cross crosslets Or. three bezants], by his wife Honour, dau. of Edmond Prideaux, of Padstow, Esq. By her, who was buried at Lawhitton Dec. 21st 1760, he had four sons and a daughter:—

1. William, bap. April 12th 1712. Probably died young, the Burial Registers imperfect till 1723.
2. Richard, who succeeded his father.
3. Honour, bap. Oct. 8th 1716, bur. at Lawhitton March 29th 1776.
4. Edward, bap. Dec. 13th 1719.
5. Robert, bap. April 25th 1721, bur. at Lawhitton Aug. 20th 1764.

This Edward Bennett died 1750, and was succeeded by his second son and heir:—

VII. Richard Bennett, bap. July 21st 1715. In compliance with the will of his maternal grandfather he assumed the name of Coffin, in lieu of Bennett. He m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Thomas Bury, of Bury Narbor, co. Devon, and widow of Sir William Morice, Bart., of Werrington, co. Devon; 2ndly, Anne, dau. of the Reverend William Pennington, of Bodmin; and 3rdly, Anne, dau. of the Reverend Lewis Monoux, brother of Sir Humphry Monoux, Bart. He died s.p. Sept. 30th 1796, and was also buried at Lawhitton. This event is thus recorded in an old family Bible at Prideaux Place—

“30th September 1796. On this day dyed at Esher, in Surrey, his [Prideaux] ever dear friend and kinsman, Richard Coffin, Esqr. formerly Bennett, buried at Lawhitton, Cornwall, born 1715.”¹

Having no issue he left Hexworthy to his relative Edmond Prideaux, second son of Humphry Prideaux, Esq., of Padstow, who married Hebe, dau. of Sir John St. Aubyn, Bart. His dau. and coheirress Elizabeth m. George Barrett-Leonard, 3rd son of Sir Thomas Barrett-Leonard, Bart; and their grandson, Francis Barrett-Leonard, is the present proprietor of Hexworthy.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Between the porch and tower, in Lawhitton churchyard, is a crumbling slab of slate, which formerly lay in the church, so broken as to be almost illegible, with this border legend:—

Here lyeth the body of
Richard Bennett Esqr^r Councillor at law,
Who was buried . . .
Anno Dom̄ 1619 Ætatis suæ ———¹

In the centre space near the top is inscribed lengthways of the slab—

Zeal, love, and mercy might him well define,
A learned laurier and a good diuine.
For preachers, poore, and fettered prisoners saw
That he had learn'd the gospell with ye law.
The ambitious Judgment seat he never sought,
Where God is sold for Gayne, y^e poor for nought.

At the lower end of this stone are the arms of Bennett:—Three demi-lions ramp^t.; impaling a chev. between three bats displayed, for Cloberic. A little above in an incised border is the following, added in 1650:—

Tumulū patris dignissimi Anno
Doī 1619 Editum, et inter nuperas
Militum vigilas crematione
Consumptum, restituit Robertus
Bennet, A^r. Anno Dōm. 1650.

From this it would seem that the Parliamentary soldiers, quartered as they were in the Church, used this slab as a convenient hearthstone. This is probably the reason this stone has crumbled since it was exposed to the open air.

In the tower, fastened to the wall, is a massive sculptured slab,

also removed from its original position in the Chancel, but in good preservation. The margin has the following—

Here lyeth the body of
Robert Bennett of Hexworthy in this pish Esq^r, who Was here interred on y^e
7 day of July Anno Dom. 1683. In y^e 79th year of his age.

In the centre of the stone are the arms of Bennett, impaling Mules and Mohun, as above, with helmet and mantling. Crest, out of a mural crown a lion's head.

Near this is an elaborate monument¹ of Bath stone, consisting of a large sarcophagus, on the top of which is a reclining female figure. The ends are supported by two cupids, evidently in great affliction.

On the sarcophagus itself is the following inscription:—

RICHARD COFFIN ESQ^R
Born in the Year 1715, and Died Sep^r 30th
1796.

Below is—

Vnderneath lyeth the Body of RICHARD COFFIN Esq^r
And also of some of his nearest and dearest Relations,

Who resided for many Generations At Hexworthy in this County.

He was the Son of EDWARD BENNETT and HONOVR his Wife,
Daughter of RICHARD COFFIN, of Portlidge, Devon, Esq^r
And HONOVR his Wife, Who was Daughter of EDMOND PRIDEAUX, of Padstow, Esq^r in this County. Dying without issue In him ended the lineal Descent of the Families of BENNETT and COFFIN.

POPE'S MATERNAL ANCESTRY.

Mr. Joseph Hunter, F.S.A. published in 1857 a Tract on 'Pope, his Descent, and Family Connections,' which Mr. Robert Davies of York, F.S.A. followed up in 1858 with a Tract entitled 'Pope, additional facts concerning his Maternal Ancestry,' London, John Russell Smith, 1858. To this latter I propose to make additions from the York Registers.

Page 8.—Edward Turner's wife was buried 14 June 1571. I presume she was Joan Colson, who married Edward Turner 24 January 1565-6, at All Saints Pavement. If so, she must have been his second wife. One Edward Turner was baptized at St. Olave's 17 July, 1541.

Page 9.—Mr. Thomas Fale was buried at St. Michael le Belfrey 14 March 1570-1.

¹ Gilbert, speaking of this monument, says—"On the top are the arms of Coffin and Demett, quartering those of several other families." There are no arms at all there now.

MONUMENTAL SLAB TO ROBERT BENNET Esq^{RE}

IN

LAWHITTON CHURCH

Page 13.—Edward Turner was buried the 20 December 1580.

Page 18.—Henry Maye, Alderman, married Anne Thomson 15 February 1584-5; was buried 2 July 1596. His widow, Lady Anne Maye, remarried 18 January 1596-7, Gabriel Thwaytes, Gentleman. These dates are from the Register of St. Martin's, Conceystreet, York.

Page 20.—1581, March 28, John Stevenson, Gentleman, and Margaret Willoughbie, widow, married at St. Helen's, just three months and one week after her father's funeral. They had Henry, baptized 31 January 1583-4, John baptized 8 June 1585, Francis, baptized 29 June 1589. She remarried also six months after her husband's death; as it seems pretty certain that she was wife of Christopher Willoughby, junior, who was buried 18 September 1580. His mother was buried 8 January 1572-3; his son Laneclot 24 September 1578; his daughter Anne Willowbie, named by her grandfather Turner, "daughter-in-law to John Stevenson, Gentleman," was buried 9 July 1589; Joan, also named by her grandfather (p. 15), married 2 October 1589, Charles Braband; and Thomas Willowbie, named by his grandfather, who was a vintner, was buried 4 July 1618. All these dates are from St. Helen's.

Page 21.—Thomas Blenkarne and Catherine Turner were married 16 January 1581-2 at St. Helen's. Mr. Thomas Blenkarne of Bootham was buried 28 December 1611 at St. Olave's.

Lucy Turner was baptized 26 February 1569-70.

Edward Turner, baptized 12 August 1570, is called son of "Captain Torner." There was an Edward Turner of the parish of St. Crux, who had issue William, bapt. 21 May, buried 27 May 1595; James, bapt. 9 Oct. 1596, buried 13 January 1596-7; Francis, bapt. 13 May 1598; Mary, bapt. 6 July, buried 8 July 1600; and who was himself buried 9 Dec. 1603. But he cannot be the son of Edward Turner of All Saints Pavement, if he be the same who married Johan Hudson, at St. Crux, 24 April 1580. George Turner, baptized 6 August 1592 (the father's name not given), was buried 18 February 1629-30, being styled Surgeon. His son Joseph, baptized 15 January 1623-4, buried 19 May 1649, had George, baptized 15 July, buried 17 July 1644; Joseph, baptized 22 Dec. 1645; Timothy, Beatrix, Robert, and Benjamin, a posthumous child, baptized 19 October 1649. Timothy Turner was buried 25 July 1695, having had by Frances Hurst, his wife (married 23 May 1671, buried as a widow 27 March 1700) Timothy, Nathaniel, Benjamin, Mercey, Mary, and John, who left issue.

There was also another son, whose baptism would take place in the years that are missing, viz. 1572 to 1575 inclusive; viz. Marmaduke, son to Mr. Edward Turner, buried 27 November 1575, at St. Helen's. It is not a little singular that another Marmaduke Turner of All Saints Pavement, "obit Londini 14 Nov. 1599," his daughter Mary was bapt. 16 January 1599-1600, and his widow Mary remarried 21 Oct. 1601 Solomon Browne. Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Turner, was buried 11 January 1634-5, at St. Martin's, Conceystreet.

Pages 23, 24.—John Darley is described as Attorney. Elizabeth his daughter was baptized 7 March 1573-4, married 11 December 1591 Henry Topham, Esquyre. By Sir Edmund Sheffield she had Ursula, baptized 10 October 1613, who married 9 January 1633-4 Mr. Richard Hutton. Mr. William Sheffield and Dame Elizabeth the Lady Sheffield were married 14 June 1615. The Lady Elizabeth Sheffield, wife to Sir William Sheffield, Knight, was buried 30 July 1633. July 31, M.I., Drake's Eboracum, 328. These dates are from St. Martin's, Concestrect. Sir Edmund Sheffield was drowned at Whitgift Ferry 3 December 1614, and his body was never found. Drake's Eboracum, p. 133.

Page 25.—Philip Turner and Edith Gilminge were married 18 January 1589-90. The baptism of Edith, daughter of William Gilminge, Inholder, took place at St. Helen's 27 November 1569. As this entry is one of the earliest in the Register, it may seem singular that Mr. Davies should have overlooked it.

Page 26.—William Gilmyng was buried at St. Helen's 2 February 1590-1; his widow 2 November 1595. They had issue Christiana, who married 9 April 1599, at St. Helen's, George Ellis, Esq., and Elizabeth, baptized there 14 Dec. 1601, buried 26 August 1602. At St. Michael-le-Belfrey they baptized Elizabeth 4 January 1607-8; Ann, 13 March 1608-9, buried two days after; and buried two children 19 September 1612. 'Mrs. Christian Ellis, wife to Mr. George Ellis, was buried 22 January 1613-4, in the high quire,' in which Katherine, daughter of Sir George Ellis, was buried 23 January, 1621-2; and Sir George Ellis, Knight (who was one of the Council of the North in September 1619), 22 May 1626." They had also Edith, Richard, John, James and Joan Gilmyng.

Elizabeth Gilming, probably sister of William, married 2 September 1573 William Moorhouse, Gentleman, of St. Helen's parish, who was buried 6 January 1601-2, and had issue Francis, John, William, Elizabeth, Mary, Ann, Catherine, Frances, and Alice. Their daughter Elizabeth Moorhouse, baptized 3 August 1577, married at St. Helen's 18 August 1595, Augustine Sherburne, Gentleman, of the parish of St. Martin's, Concestrect, M.A. Corpus Coll., Oxford, Clerk of the Peace for the West Riding of York, who died 29 October 1610, and was buried at St. Martin's, Concestrect. They had issue Nevill, baptized there 19 October 1596, "only son, slain at Lützen 18 November 1632, with the King of Sweden:" Chauncey's 'Hertfordshire.' Their daughter Elizabeth was buried 10 April 1607. Chauncey makes the wife of Augustine Sherburn to be daughter of ... Willoughby of York. The Rev. Robert Gilmyng was instituted to the rectory of Kirkby Underdale, Yorkshire, 30 Oct. 1581, and was living 1607. He was also rector of Holtby. He had issue Frances, buried 12 September 1588; Alice, baptized 14 July 1588, married 21 February 1619-20, Mr. William Simpson; Judith, married 22 January 1605-6, Mr. Robert Harrison; Magdalen married 1 August 1615, Mr. Richard Spofforth, and Henry Gilmyng buried 17 April 1635, who, by Margaret his wife, had issue William Gilmin, baptized 20 April 1628, at Kirkby Underdale.

Page 27.—Frances Turner married by License 23 January 1613-4, at St. Saviour's, York, Walter Wood, Clerk, Master of Art. Witnesses Robert Gillmyng, William Gilbryn, and — Gillmyng.

Martha Turner was baptized 26 February 1594-5.

Katherine Turner was baptized 14 April 1596.

Page 28.—Phillip Turner, Gentleman, St. Mary Gate, was buried at St. Olave's, York, 3 May 1634. His father had given him a lease of lands in Clifton, the greater part of which township was in the parish of St. Olave, Frances Turner, of Gilegate, was buried at St. Olave's 26 October 1634.

Page 46.—In the parish of St. Olave, and in Marygate—not in Goodramgate, as conjectured—Mr. William Turner spent the ten years for which Mr. Davies could not account; and baptized seven children in that church. They were—1630, September 28, Ann, d. Mr. William Turner.

1631-2, January 2, William, s. Mr. William Turner.

1632, December 28, Thomas, s. Mr. William Turner.

1634, April 29, Elizabeth, d. Mr. William Turner.

1636, May 6, Elizabeth, d. Mr. William Turner.

1637, October 9, Edith, d. Mr. William Turner.

1639, March 26, Mary, d. Mr. William Turner.

Of these, Elizabeth was buried 1st May 1634 at St. Olave's, and Edith, daughter of William Turner, Gentleman, was buried at St. Helen's 29 March 1639. So that Edith Turner, mother of Alexander Pope, and baptized at Worsborough 18 June 1642 (Hunter's 'South Yorkshire,' ii, p. 292) was the second child of that name.

Page 46.—This William, son of Mr. William Turner, was surviving in 1681 (p. 49) and therefore was not one of the youths whose "gentle blood was shed in honour's cause" (p. 43). There was a William Turner living in the parish of St. Michael's, Ousebridge, who baptized there a son, Phillip, 11 July 1653, and a son, William, 17 June 1655.

Page 50.—I have not been able to discover what Mr. Tomlinson was husband of Miss Turner. One Mr. Thomas Tomlinson, of the parish of St. Michael le Belfrey, York, was buried there 23 February 1694-5; his wife Elizabeth (Turner?) 22 Oct. 1691. They had issue Elizabeth, bapt. 7 April 1665; Anthony, bapt. 18 April, bur. 21 April 1666; Christiana, bapt. 15 March, bur. 17 March 1668-9; Bridget, bapt. 4 July, bur. 13 July 1672; and Thomas, bapt. 23 April 1676, buried 19 August 1717.

I have not found the marriage of Mr. Mace and Miss Turner. The Rev. Henry Mace was buried at York Minster 30 December 1679. The Rev. Charles Mace of St. John's Coll., Cambridge, A.B. 1677, M.A. 1681, was instituted to the Rectory of Dunnington near York 26 July 1681, and to the Rectory of St. Saviour's, York, 2 March 1680-1, both which he held till his death. He died 20 August and was buried at the Church of St. Maurice 22 August 1712. Mrs. Mace, widow, was buried at St. Saviour's 25 September 1725. They had Elizabeth, buried 30 July 1684 at Holy Trinity, Goodramgate, and Ellen bapt. 2 April 1685 at the Bedern Chapel. Their son the Rev. Charles Mace, baptized 29 October 1682 at the Bedern, was also of St. John's Coll., Cambridge, A.B. 1703, A.M. 1717; Rector of Holy Trinity, King's Court, York, 23 May 1707, and Rector of St. Helen's, York, the same year till 13 January 1715-6, when he was instituted to the Vicarage of the Holy Trinity at Hull, where he was buried 21 April 1721. A Mr. Thomas Mace baptized five children, Henry, Thomas, Mary, Mary and Martha, between 1679 and 1686. Christiana Mace, sister of the Rector of Dunnington, married 15 August 1677, at St. Saviour's, the Rev. George Halley, and died 19 August 1680, aged 33.

WILL OF A SCOTTISH HERALD OF THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY.

The will here printed, shows the amount of furniture owned by, and style of living at the period of an officer of the Royal Household.

The debt by the Earl of Traquair, then Lord High Treasurer, is for official salary as Herald.

The records of heralds' commissions is incomplete at the date of Drysdale's appointment, which took place in or before 1614; his predecessor, John Blindsell, Islay Herald, was alive in 1610. Drysdale also held the office of Keeper of the Records of the Lyon Court.

The surname is not one either common or distinguished. Arms given in Pont's MS.—Argent, a saltire Azure between four crosses moline Gules, a chief of the second. Motto, Constancy with discretion. These bearings are evidently founded on those of "Lord Boyis of Dryvisdaill of auld," given by Sir David Lindsay.

Drysdale's widow died in May, 1643; by her will dated 18 April, she leaves all her property, £2,138, to her aunt Janet, daughter of the late Eleazar Makiesonne, Bute pursuivant, residing in Edinburgh, whom she nominates sole executrix.

THE CANNINGS OF FOXCOTT.

BY THE REV. T. P. WADLEY, M.A., RECTOR OF NAUNTON BEAUCHAMP.

The genealogy of Canning as given in the 'Visitation of Warwickshire,' edited by Mr. Fetherston for the Harleian Society, page 225, appears in the earlier descents from the Marshalls (from the marriage with whose heiress the Foxcott estate eventually became the possession of Thomas Canning, Lord Mayor of London, through his marriage with Agnes daughter and heir of John Salmon,) to be erroneously given. In the engraving of the Arms the second quarter should be, Gules, three halberd heads in fess Argent, probably the coat of Salmon. Mr. Fetherston, following Harleian MS. 1167, gives the descent thus:—

Galfridus le Marshall dedit terras suas in Foxcott Gilb'to filio suo.

Gilbertus le Marshall.

Simon le Marshall.

Joh'es Solman t'pe H. 4, Matilda filia et hæres Simonis de Foxcott jure uxoris. le Marshall de Foxcott.

Agneta filia et hæres Thomas Canninge de Foxcott
Johannis Solman. temp'or H. 6.

This Thomas Canninge was Lord Mayor of London, and son of John Canninge by Joan Wotton. See pedigrees of his family in Barrett's 'Hist. of Bristol,' published in 1789, and Dallaway's 'Antiquities' of that city, published in 1834. Also consult Dugdale's 'Warwickshire,' 2nd edn., p. 633, and Lansdowne MS. (British Museum) 1233; from which it will appear that the Harleian copy of the Visitation is wrong, and that the descent should be given thus:—

John le Marshall of Foxcott, co. Warwick, Esq'r. bore for his arms, Sable, a goat salient Or, horned and hoofed Argent.

'Galfridus le Marshall dedit terras suas in Foxcott Gilberto filio suo,' Mary daughter and heir of John Brideport of Brideport, co. Dorset. ARMS.—Ermine, on a chief Or a demi-lion rampant Ermine.

by deed dated at Foxcott on Tuesday the Vigil of St. Thomas the Martyr, 23 Edward I. This deed is given in Lansd. MS. 1233.

The name of Canning was in the counties of Warwick and Gloucester at an early period. Walter Canyng of Stratford-on-Avon was ordained an acolyte in Worcester Cathedral in 1374; and in the same year "Will'mus Canyngus maior ville Bristollie" presented a chaplain to a chantry in the church of All Saints at Bristol, as appears by documents in the Worcester diocesan registry. This William had served the office of Bailiff at Bristol in 1362: see 'The Mayor's Kalendar,' printed for the Camden Society in 1872. There are several early Canning wills among the Bristol Corporation muniments, the first bearing date 2 Oct., 1396, and being that of William Canynges, grandfather of Thomas who married Agnes Salmon of Foxcote.

The oldest Canning will, if I mistake not, in the Worcester Probate Office is dated 7th December, 1539, and is that of William Canyng of Ilmington, husbandman. He desired to be buried within the churchyard of Ilmington, and left to the high altar of the church the sum of iij^l. "I gyue also toward the repaco of the belles viij^l." To each of his children xx^s "whan they shall co'e vnto lawfull age." The residue of his goods was to go to Johan his wife and executrix. Thomas Canyng was appointed overseer, and Thomas Edon and Roger Barrett witnessed the will.

1610. June 3. Elizabeth Canning of Foxcote, widow, makes her will: "first I bequeath my Soule to Almighty god my Maker and Redeem^r by whose merrittes I hope to be Saved. And my Body to be buried in the Church or Church Yard of Illmington." She gives "towards the repaire of the said Church of Illmington" five shillings, and to the poor of the said parish twenty shillings. "To all my Childrens Children to every on of them w^{ch} shalbe lyving att my decease a sheepe." To "my sonn Paul Canning my best yellowe Rugg for a bedd." To "my daughter Ann Rowney one Rugg for a bedd, and a wainscott Chest." To "my daughter Rylands sonn Richard, one joynd table & frame w^{ch} stands in the plour." To "my Mayd Ellin Rose Tenn shillings." To "all my sonne Richards servants dwelling att foxcote at the tyme of my decease to ev'y of them Twelue pence." All other goods to "my sonne Georg Canning" who is to be sole executor.

Elizabeth Can'nyng her mark. Seal—a lion rampant. Witnessed by Thomas Rowney and Tristram Yate. Will proved at Worcester 12th October, 1611. The goods of the deceased were appraised 23rd September, 1611, by Richard Stokes, John Riland, and Thomas Rowney. The inventory states that the said Elizabeth Canning died on the 4th day of August in that year; also that her purse and apparel were valued at xiiij^{li} vj^s viij^d, "one bedsten wthe the vallance and curtaines in her lodging Chamber," xxx^s, and ij Rugges—ij^{li} v^s. I continued to search the index to wills at Worcester from 1611 to 1750, but did not meet with any further mention of Canning of Foxcote.

RYLANDS, OF THE RYLANDS, WITHIN WEST-
HOUGHTON, CO. LANCASTER.

The place from which this family took its name is situated in the township of Westhoughton and parish of Deane, in the hundred of Salford, and county palatine of Lancaster. One very large field and several other smaller plots of ground in the neighbourhood retain the name, and are still called "the Ryelands;" possibly these scattered fields all once formed parts of the original estate, though the greater part of the land¹ has changed its name. This name Ryelands is derived from the Anglo Saxon Rye or Rhee, a water-course or stream, and Lands, the lands adjoining or above the stream. The stream is now called Cunningham Brook, and runs through a steep and deep miniature Dene or ravine, forming, at one of its bends, a natural protection to the presumed site of the residence of the ancient possessors of the soil, now occupied by an old farm house, near to "Dobb Brow," and called "Rigby's o'th Yate." The name, as a surname, has been much varied in its spelling and has been further corrupted by the local pronunciation into Ry lance, Roy lance, &c.²

I. The first member of the family whose name has come down to us is Robert de Rilandes, who was living in the reign of King Henry III. [1216-1272.] His son

II. John son of Robert of Rilandes (also called *John del Rylondes*⁴) gave to the Abbot and Convent of Cokersand part of his lands within the town of [West] Haghton, that is to say all the land which he had upon Balleslee which Adam Bunbrede held of him, &c. [Deed s.d. quoted in a suit respecting property in Westhoughton, Duchy Pleadings, Edw. VI, vol. iii, B. 2.] It is probably the same John de Rilandes who with Henry de Trafford, David de Hulton, Alexander de Pilkington, Richard de Radcliffe, Ellis de Levre, Richard son of David, Richard son of John, Richard de Workedele, Thomas de Aston, Robert de Shoresworde and Robert Untoune were appointed a jury to enquire into the true value of the knights' fees and the advowsons of churches which were held of Robert Grelle in the manor of Mamcestre, 13th September, 1282. [Chetham Soc., liii, p. 168.]

² Although these have been supposed to be entirely separate names there is abundant evidence to show that this is not the case.

³ The Roman numerals are intended to indicate approximately the various generations in the absence of an unbroken descent.

⁴ Fine Roll 10th Edw. 1, memb. 10 (No. 50, P.R.O.).

III. The son of John seems to have been John de Riland, or Rilandes, whose wife Cecilia was most probably the daughter of William de Sale,¹ by his wife Cecilia de Holinworth. These persons are referred to in the following deeds extracted by the late Canon Raines, F.S.A., from his Lancashire MSS., xxv, p. 26.

SALE ARMS.

1. Know all men &c that I John son of John de Riland and Cecilia my wife have given &c to John de Byron and Joan his wife all our lands &c in Holinworth [in the township of Butterworth and parish of Rochdale] that is to say the lands which we had of the gift of William de Sale and Cecilia his wife, rendering one peppercorn at the feast of St. Martin in Winter, and for this he has given me eight marks. Witness: the lord Geoffrey de Bracebridge, Roger de Middleton, Geoffrey de Chaderton, Alexander de Pilkington, Adam de Prestwich and others. [Undated.]

2. A grant of land in Holinworth from William de Sale and Cecilia his wife to the lord John de Burun and Joanna his wife, rendering a rose at the feast of St. John the Baptist, purchase paid 14 marks. Witnesses: The lord Geoffrey de Bracebridge, Roger de Middleton, Richard de Chaderton, Alexander de Pilkington, Adam de Prestwich, William de Hopwood, W. de Sherwend the clerk and others. [Undated.]

3. Cecilia de Holinworth, widow [who appears to have resumed her maiden name] released to Sir John Byron two bovates of land in Holinworth, in Butterworth, which William de Sale her late husband had formerly sold to him. Dated 26th Ed. I. [A.D. 1297-8].

Contemporary with John de Rilandes we find, in the great De Lacy Inquisition, 16th February, 1311, Thomas de Ryelands, a free tenant in Burnley, where he then held twenty acres of land for which he paid four shillings per annum. In Whitaker's "History of Whalley," it is stated that the name of Royle was originally Ryelands, but it seems much more probable that Thomas was a member of the Westhoughton family and went to live at Burnley.

IV. The next generation is represented by several persons whose parentage is not yet ascertained. Of these the first two appear in Subsidy Rolls of 1st Edward III [1327] and 6th Edward III [1332]:—

1. Roll of Richard de Houghton and others collectors of a twentieth granted to the King by the lady, 1 Ed. III, Lane. West Halghton. Robert del Rygloudes, assessed at 14 pence.
William del Rygloudes, assessed at 12 pence.

¹ The arms attributed to the Sale family are Argent on a bend engrailed Sable three fleurs-de-lis of the field.

2. Roll of all persons taxed to the fifteenth and tenth,
6 Ed. III, Lanc.

[West] Haighton. William de Rylandes, assessed at 3 shillings.
Robert de Rylandes, assessed at 18½ pence.

In 1333 John de Rylands, with Adam de Radcliffe, John de Heton, Adam de Lever, Roger de Bolton, Richard de Wichenes and John de Bedford, witnesses a grant of land in Rumworth by David de Hulton to John son of Henry de Hulton [Harl. MS., 2112].

V. William [de] Rylands, with Thurstan and Thomas his sons had a lease of lands in Westhoughton from the Abbot of Cokersand in 1395-6, and in the following year the same abbot leased lands to Thomas, Laurence, and John Rylands. In 1425-6 the land is said to have been "late in the tenure of Laurence Rylands." [Miscellaneous Rolls, Duchy of Lanc., P.R.O. Division 25, Bundle Z, No. 11.]

VI. Robert del Rylandes, held lands in Pemberton, co. Lanc., as well as in Westhoughton. The following deeds relating to Agnes, wife of Robert, and to their son were extracted by the late Canon Raines from his Lancashire MSS., xxv, 270:—

² Casts of the seals of Agnes and Nicholas de Rylands were given to me, with many others, by Mr. Langton, of Ingatstone.

VII. Nicholas del Rylandes, the son of Robert and Agnes, married in 1430 Margery, the daughter of Sir Thomas Gerard, Knight.¹ He was living in 1474 and was then seventy-eight years of age. The following deeds all relate to him. Numbers 1, 2 and 3, are from the same volume as the last, and Number 4 is from the Shakerley² deeds:—

¹ Margery was most probably one of the Gerards of the Bryn, but as all the printed pedigrees of that family are very meagre and uncertain at this period, and as there were several persons named Sir Thomas Gerard living about the same time, it is not possible to state definitely who she was. The same Nicholas also appears on the Chester Recognizance Rolls [Welsh Records, P.R.O., A.D. 1441 to 1443].

VIII. William of the Ryland, who seems to have alienated his patrimony was possibly the same person as William Ryland named in the list of Kent Gentry, temp. Henry VII, printed by Mr. James Greenstreet, from the original in the Brit. Mus.

Cottonian MSS., Faustina E ii. (see Transactions of the Kent Arch. Soc., Archæologia Cantiana, vol. xi), and in the following deed from the Shakerley MS.:

Sciãnt &c q'd ego Galfr' Shakerley de p'ochia de Leght in com' Lancastr' armig' dedi concessi &c Will'o Rylond de Maidston in com' Kanciea gen' o'ia illa t'ras et ten'ta mea in p'ochia de Dytton in p'deo com' Kane' vocat' Drakys al's diet' Sheplond &c. Test' Edro: Culpepir gen' Alexandro Davy. Jacobo Asheton. Nich'o Bradshawe et alijs. dat' apud Dytton p'dca, 22 E. 4. [1482-3.]

In the sixth year of his reign, King Edward IV, of his "especial grace and consideration of the good and gratuitous services rendered to him by his true liegeman William Rylandes," granted to him certain property in the town of Tanworth, and the same "William Ryland, otherwise William Rilandes," had also a grant from the king of Rose Hall, in the parish of Waterfulforth, co. York, both being referred to in a saving clause in an Act of Parliament of 7th and 8th Edward IV, and the first named property occurring in a saving clause in an Act of 13th Edward IV, where the land, &c., is said to have been granted to Nicholas Rylandes. In the Close Roll of 6th Edward IV, it is recorded that William Ryland, of London, gentleman, acknowledges his indebtedness in £100 to Richard Cosyngton, of Aylesford, co. Kent, gentleman.

IX. Ralph Rylands, of Westhoughton (?), in all probability a grandson of Nicholas, in 1503-4 makes the following deed, also taken from the Shakerley MS.

Pateat Uniu'sis p' p'tes me Rad'm Rylonds al's Ryland remississe d'ne Anne Shakerley Vidue et nup' ux'i Galfr'i Shakerley et Petro Shakerley filio et h'edi p'de'i Galfridi et h'edilz et assign' suis tot' jus &c q. h'eo in o'ibz t'ris &c in p'ochijs de Winwicke, Leght & Dene seu alibi in com' Lancastr' que quidã. t'rã &c p'fata Anna nup' h'uit in p'p'ta sua c'm (?) alijs t'ris no'r'e dotis seu junetur' p' termino vite sue &c. Test' magistro Jacobo Stanley archidiacono Richmund. Jacobo Hulme. Rad'o Hulme. Rob'to Chetham. Ed'o Berdisley et alijs. 19 Hen VI. [1503-4.]

This is probably the last document bearing evidence of the absolute alienation of the original property, and there is consequently much difficulty in tracing the family history during the next hundred years. The appearance of the christian names of Geoffrey and Peter shortly after this time point to the possibility that the wife of Ralph was a Shakerley. A probable son of Ralph was

X. Geoffrey Rylands, of Snyderale in Westhoughton, who died in or about the year 1508, having had, besides "younger children" by his wife,— daughter of Roger Pendlebury, of Westhoughton, Gent., a son and heir

XI. Roger Rylands, of Westhoughton, who was living in 1513 and 1558 [Duchy Pleadings], and was possibly the brother of

Omfridus or Humfrey Rylands, a tenant of Cokersand Abbey in 1501 [Chetham Society, lvii.]

XII. About this time Randal Rylands was defendant in an action respecting land in Wigan; and Nicholas Rylands and others were defendants in a suit relating to tenant-right of lands in Westhoughton, formerly held under Cokersand Abbey [Duchy Pleadings, Philip and Mary]. In 1600 Richard Rylands was plaintiff in a suit relating to crops growing in Hindley [Duchy Pl., 42 Eliz., cliv., R. G]. Humfrey Rylands, of the city of London, was guardian to the children of John Culcheth, of Abram, co. Lancaster, Gent., by Margaret his wife, daughter of — Ryland, of Westleigh, in 1598 [Act Book, Chester, and Visit. Lanc., 1664], this Humphrey was apparently a member of the Fishmongers' Company. In 1603 William Ryland, who describes himself as "one of the yeomen waiters of the Kinges Ma'ties Tower of London," made his will; he mentions his brother, Ellis Ryland, of Holdenby [afterwards of Duston], co. Northampton [who died in November, 1619], and his "cozen" [nephew?] Humfrey Rylands, of Westhoughton. Cicelic Rylands, sister (?) of William and Ellis, was married at Leigh, in 1560, to Thomas Yates. Ottiwel and Humfrey Rylands, both of Winstanley, near Wigan, died in the year 1603, and there are many entries relating to their family in the Wigan parish registers. Humfrey Rylands, of Westhoughton, married, in 1596, Elizabeth Greene, and died about 1618, having had a number of children.¹ Thomas Rylands, of Westhoughton, tanner, died unmarried in March 1617, leaving his property to his brother Henry Rylands [Churchwarden of Deane, in 1615]; among the schedule of debts owing to him the name of Peter Rylands [Churchwarden of Deane 1626] occurs. In 1617 Richard Rylands, of Sutton in Prescot parish, co. Lanc., died leaving issue by his wife Elizabeth; and in 1619 the will of Humfrey Rylands, of Cuerdley, in Prescot parish, tanner, was proved at Chester. In 1615 Ralph Rylands, of Kirkby, in the parish of Walton, co. Lanc., died leaving a widow and ten children, all named in his will.

XIII. In the next generation we have—

1. Ralph Rylands, of Pemberton, Gent., who died 8th November, 1630, leaving a son and heir, Richard [Inq. P.M.]

2. Ralph Rylands, sometime of Westhoughton, afterwards of Culcheth, in the parish of Winwick, co. Lanc., was apparently the only person of his surname who paid subsidies in Lancashire, temp. James I. and Charles I. He died in 1633, having married, at Deane Church, 25th May 1613 [transcripts at Chester], Mary Mather,¹ presumably a member of the same family as the Rev. Richard Mather, of Lowton, in Winwick parish, one of the "Pilgrim Fathers," who emigrated to New England in 1635. Their eldest son, Peter Rylands, of Culcheth, Gent., apparently died unmarried, but the descendants of their second son John Rylands, of Bedford, in Leigh parish, who married Jane, only child of George and Joan Spakeman, of Bedford, are now living at Thelwall, co. Chester. The other issue of Ralph and Mary were Ralph, William, Roger, Anne, Elizabeth, Ellen and Alice.

3. Elisabeth Rylands, sister of Ralph Rylands, of Culcheth, was the wife of George Starkie, of Pennington.²

4. Nicholas Rylands, of Shevington, in the parish of Standish, co. Lancaster, died about 1660; by his wife Frances he had two daughters, Elizabeth married to — Blackburne, and Margaret married to Ralph Prescott, of Longryding. (See "Local Gleanings, Lancashire and Cheshire," quarto series, vol. ii, pp. 141, 145).

5. Nicholas Rylands, of Kirkby [son of Ralph Rylands, of Kirkby], yeoman, died in 1660, and administration of his effects was granted to Alice, his widow.

In this generation other persons are recorded as living in South Lancashire, but they are too numerous to be noticed here.

XIV. Peter Rylands, of Daisy Hillock, in Westhoughton, Gent., agent for Sequestrations under the Parliament, died in 1663, leaving a son and heir, named below, besides several daughters.

Peter Rylands

Mr. Rylands married Sarah Feilden, widow, and he mentions his step-son Robert Feilden in his will. His daughters were: 1, Ellen, married 1st January, 1660-1, to John Rigby, of Atherton, in Leigh Parish; 2, Elizabeth, born 1647, married to — Hope, ¹ In her will dated at Culcheth 21th Sept. 1612, and proved at York 20th Nov. 1645, she says:—"I desire to be buried at my p'ishe Church of Winwicke in my ancestors buriall, & neare unto Raphc Rylandes my late husband." An examination of most of the early Mather wills shows that only the Lowton Mathers were buried at Winwick.

² According to the Rev. Samuel Mather, son of the Rev. Cotton Mather, grandson of the Rev. Increase Mather, and great-grandson of the Rev. Richard Mather above referred to, the armorial bearings of the Lowton Mathers were: ARMS.—Ermine on a fesse wavy Azure three lions rampant Or. CREST.—On a wreath, a lion sejant Or on the trunk of a tree [raguled] Vert. (See the "American Heraldic Journal," 1865, vol. i, page 21.)

³ An account of the Starkies of Pennington will be found in the "Leigh Chronicle, Hist. and Gen. Notes," vol. ii.

MATHER ARMS.²

and was living 1695; 3, Sarah, and 4, Margaret. Their brother mentions only one of his relatives in his will, his sister Elizabeth Hope.

XV. The Rev. Peter Rylands, or Rilands, of the city of Limerick, M.A., of Trin. Coll., Dublin, Treasurer and Vicar Choral of the Cathedral of Limerick, son of Peter Rylands, of Westhoughton, Gent. (born 1651, died without issue 1695), married Diana, daughter of Sir Drury Wray,¹ Bart., who remarried to the Rev. William Twigge, Archdeacon of Limerick.

Peter Rilands

Archdeacon Twigge had, by his wife Diana, two daughters and coheireses (both mentioned in their mother's will with their husbands in 1729); the younger, Anne Twigge, was married to Thomas Maunsell, Esq. [M.P. for the city of Limerick?] and the elder Jane Twigge, by her husband the Rev. Stacpole Pery, M.A., was mother of Edmond Sexton Pery, Viscount Pery; and of William Pery, Bishop of Limerick, created Baron Glentworth, who was the father of the first Earl of Limerick.

Various families of the name of Rylands are to be found both in England and America, of these, some, there can be little doubt, are descended from the Westhoughton family, whilst others probably descend from Adam de Rylandes, of Rylandes or Rylondis, in Wilmslow parish, co. Chester, living in the thirteenth century and the presumed ancestor of the yeoman family of Rylands of Morley. [Earwaker's East Cheshire, i, 142, &c.] There is also a hamlet or township in Lincolnshire called Ryland, and it would be interesting to know whether it gave name to a local family and also whether the family of Ryland or Riland, of Gloucestershire, descends from a person who assumed his name from property in that county. A place called "The Rylands" in the parish of Randwick, co. Gloucester, is mentioned in "The Genealogist," vol. iii, p. 327.

Of some of these families the writer hopes to give an account in a future paper, and, in the meantime, he will be much indebted to any reader of The Genealogist who will favour him with information regarding any family of the name of Rylands, Ryland, Riland, Rylance, Roylance, &c., &c., in any part of Great Britain, America, or the Colonies.

J. PAUL RYLANDS, F.S.A.

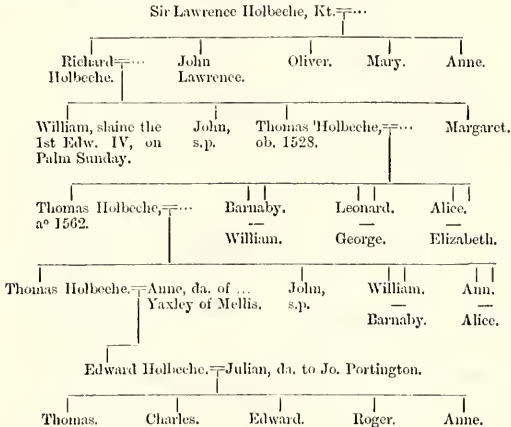

Highfields, Thelwall, near Warrington.

¹ The interesting history of the Wrays of Glentworth is now being published in a very readable form by Mr. C. Dalton. The founder of the family was Sir Christopher Wray, Lord Chief Justice of England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Witt: hery als Clarenceulx
Kinge of Armes.

Robert Strelley, of Bowdon, co. Leicester, esquire, the grantee of the arms and crest in 1555, appears to have been the son of Sir Nicholas Strelley, Knight, a third son of the house of Strelley in com. Derby, whose pedigree was entered at the Visitation of Leicestershire in 1619. (Harl. Soc., p. 194). From the grant it seems that he was a privy councillor, and had rendered certain services to Queen Mary at Fremyng-ham, and in Scotland, and at the siege of Mustrell, &c.; but what these services were, I have not been able to ascertain.

In the Visitation Pedigree he is described as of West Langton in com. Leicester, of which place he was lord of the manor, and lived at the manor house there. He married Johanna, daughter of Nicholas Rowell of com. Oxford, by whom he had, with two daughters, two sons, John Strelley and Nicholas Strelley; and died in 1595. (Nichols' Leic., ii, 663). By indenture dated 24 May, 2 Edw. VI., the King, in consideration of certain lands in cos. Lincoln and Nottingham, granted to Robert Strelley certain messuages and lands in Harborough and Bowden, lately belonging to the chantry of Buk'ton alias Boulton in com. Northampton, and other premises in cos. Nottingham, Leicester, Northampton, Lincoln, &c.; but whether this was the grantee, or another person of the same name who died 23 January, 1553-4, I cannot say.

See further Nichols' 'Leicestershire,' ii, 472, 491, 661, 663; Hill's 'Langton,' 19-21, 227; Hill's 'Market Harborough,' 5; 'Visitation of Leicestershire,' 1619, (Harl. Soc.) 194.

² It must be left to the future historian of the Rooke family to determine whether Laurence Rooke, the Gresham Professor of Astronomy and Geometry, was the son or the "studious nephew" of George Rooke. His death, which occurred 27 June, 1662, was sudden, occasioned, says Pope, "by overheating himself in a walk from the Marquis of Dorchester's house at Highgate to the Royal Society, then sitting at Gresham College," and (as is added in the Biographie Universelle) "dans la nuit même qu'il avait attendue depuis plusieurs années pour terminer de curieuses observations sur les satellites de Jupiter;" and his will was merely nuncupative, but in this, made 24 June, "in the presence and hearing of Walter Pope, Doctor of Physicke, and Abraham Hill, Merchant," he appoints "my Lord Bishop of Exeter, meaning Doctor Seth Waide," exor., leaves only trifling legacies, and makes no mention of family or estate. The will was proved in London, 9 July, 1662 (99 Jand).

For his life, list of Works, cf. also Ward's Lives of the Professors of Gresham College, 1740; and the History of the Royal Society.

Owing to the lamented illness and absence of the Master, the books of Caius Coll., Cambridge, are for the moment inaccessible, and the parentage, &c., of the Laurence Rooke of that College who graduated as A.B. in 1639, and A.M. in 1644, has not been ascertained.

³ Admon. (P.C.C.) 20 Oct. 1704, of Dame Mary Rooke, ad's Luttrell, late of S. James', Westminster, granted to her husband, Sir George Rooke, Knt., Vice Admiral of England. Admon. de bonis non 2 May 1727, to Samuel Mills, Esq., surviving exor. of Sir George Rooke, now also deceased.

⁴ James Rooke had by Miss Tasburgh (who had been companion, and elsewhere styled niece, to his first wife, and who died under age, soon after having been brought to bed of) a daughter, Margaret Frances Disney Rooke, who married William Sheldon, Esq., of Weston House, co. Warwick. Of this marriage there were seven sons and one daughter. (1) Ralph Sheldon, Esq., of Weston, M.P. for Wilton, who m. Jane, d. of ? Sir Francis Holbourne; (2) William, who m., but d. s.p.; (3) Edward, who d. unmar.; (4) James, who m. the dau. and heir of Rev. Mostyn, or H'ymne; (5) Charles Henry, of Haute Fontaine, in France, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Gorge, Esq., of Eye, co. Hereford, M.P. for Leominster, and relief of Charles Graham, Esq., of the Netherby family, of which marriage there were five daughters:—i, Charlotte, wife of M. Nègré de Mossars [s.p.]; ii, Margaret, m. M. De Chastelet; iii, Lucy, unmar., lived with, iv, Matilda, who m. Victor Lourmel, Count de Hommelin nr. Lamballe, Brittany, and had one son Charles; and v, Emma, who m. M. Charles Duden of the town of Cateau Candresis in French Flanders, and had one son Charles. (6) George, of Enns, Upper Austria, who m. Frances, Princess of Auersperg; (7) Henry, who d. at Weston, 1761. The dau. Margaret Frances Anne, m. 1772, Francis Talbot, Esq., of Witham Place, Essex (whose first wife had been Lady Anne, dau. of Thomas Belaysse, first Earl of Fauconberg), the 6th son of George Talbot, Esq., and younger brother to George Talbot, who succeeded as 14th Earl of Shrewsbury, and left issue two sons, of whom Lieut.-Col. Charles Thomas Talbot (b. 1782, d. 1838) was, by his marriage with Julia, 3rd d. of Sir Henry Joseph Tichborne, Bart. (who rem. in 1858, Capt. Washington Hibbert, of Bilton Grange, co. Warwick), father of Bertram Arthur, who succeeded in 1852, as 17th Earl of Shrewsbury, and d. unmar. in 1856, being the last male descendant of the 10th Earl.

⁵ Will of James Rooke, of Bigsweat, General in army, dated 15 Apr. 1805, appoints Henry Charles, Duke of Beaufort, and Edmund Escount, Esq., of Lincoln Inn, Exors. Everything to them in trust for his wife Elizabeth, during her life, &c. Pro. in London, 23 June, 1806.

⁶ Henry Rooke, late Major of the 100th Regiment of Foot, published in 1783, "Travels to the Coast of Arabia Felix, and from thence by the Red Sea and Egypt to Europe, containing a short account of an expedition undertaken against the Cape of Good Hope. In a series of letters;" a little 8vo. pamphlet of 129 pages only, which had a second edition in 1784, and a third in 1788. There was also a French edition in 1788, and a German one, published at Leipzig, in 1789. He wrote also "Account of the Expedition of Ancona, undertaken by a Russian and Turkish Armament, 1799." London, 1800, 8vo.

His brother Hayman Rooke was the author of—besides other similar small publications—"Sketch of the History of Bolsover and Peak Castles," 1785, 4to.; "An account of the remains of two Roman Villæ discovered near Mansfield, Woodhouse, in May and October, 1786," 1787, 4to. (which had an abridged edition in 1801); "Description of the Great Oak in Saley Forest, Nottingham," 1798, 8vo.; "Description and Sketches of some remarkable Oaks in the park at Welbeck, London," 1790, 4to.; and "Sketch of the ancient and present state of Sherwood Forest, Nottingham," 1798.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Memorial Slabs in Monks Horton Church."Memorie parentum Sacrum.

"Here lieth the Body of Ursula the daughter of Sir Reginald Scott of Scotts Hall, Knt, wife of Laurence Rooke of Horton, Gent. who died in An^o 1612, by whom she had issue Thomas, Elizabeth, Marie, George, Anne, Ursula, William, John and William, shee departed this life the 16th day of Jan^y 1629, aged 79 years, she lived religiously, died righteously and her body part abideth here in hope of joyfull resurrection to bliss eternally.

"Favour is deceitful and beauty is vain; but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised." (Prov. xxxi, 30).

"Posuit Georgius Rooke pietatis filialis obedientie et amoris ergo."

A coat of arms above this apparently belonging to another monument.

"This said Monument was dutifully erected at the only charge of Laurence the eldest son of George Rooke of this parish, Esq^{re} to perpetuate as he might and this may the pretious memory of his dear deceased father who lieth buried beneath the same and who had issue the said Laurence, William and Mary. Their chaste mother Mary the daughter of William Burrell of Poplar in Middlesex, Esq^{re}. And when he had deservedly reaped the just reputation of a complete gentleman by his conversation amongst strangers beyond the seas, enriched himself with the beautiful esteem of a munificent neighbor by constant hospitalitie here at home, and in the 69th year of his age, June 2^d 1649, finished with great lamentation this home of his to be possessed with greater joy of that immortalitie where time shall be no more."

There is also an illegible stone, the inscription on which was partially copied thus by the Rev. Joseph Price, Rector, 1768.

"Here lieth the Body of William Rooke son of Laurence Rooke late of Monks Horton Gent who left issue by Anne his first wife daughter of George Jink (or Inkle) Gent., George, and Anne and Laurence by his 2^d wife Susannah daughter of ... (Hennan) [perhaps Heyman] and he departed this life 2^d of May 16(45) in the 58th year of his age."

Notices of Books.

AN INDEX OF HEREDITARY TITLES OF HONOUR. By EDWARD SOLLY, F.R.S., F.S.A. London: Published for the Index Society, by Longmans, Green and Co., 1880. 4to.

The Index Society, of the publications of which this is the fifth volume, was founded in 1879, and bids fair to be one of the most useful of modern literary undertakings. An Index of Royalists whose estates were confiscated during the Commonwealth, an Index of Municipal Offices, and several others, have been already printed. The first volume contains "A Preliminary List of English Indexes," an index of indexes, which, though unavoidably incomplete, is of immense value, and will doubtless be augmented and reprinted by its compiler Mr. Wheatley, the Hon. Secretary, in due time. No matter what subject one is studying in these days, the number of books printed about it is so great that the most industrious enquirer will be long before he can make himself acquainted with their titles, much longer with their contents. Every year therefore indexes to what has been already published on any subject are becoming more sought for and more necessary. This want it is the aim of the Index Society to supply, and it has sprung into being not a moment too soon. The important work begun by the Index Society has not yet been appreciated by the public, because it is too young at present to be well known; but the time will come, and that before long, if the Society be well managed, when it will take its place as the first and most useful of our literary associations. So far as its publications already extend, it has done good service to those whose taste is for genealogical and historic enquiry, and its prospective works, Indexes of English Topography; of the Biography of Topographical Writers; Local Engravings arranged under Counties; Painted Portraits of British Worthies; Dugdale's Warwickshire; Hutchins' Dorset; and Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, may be taken as a guarantee that a fair proportion of its publications will be devoted to subjects of especial interest to the genealogist.

Mr. Solly's "Hereditary Titles of Honour" now before us is a book which ought to be among the "working tools" of every genealogist. It gives us a clue to a large class of pedigrees entirely uncatalogued in the various guides to printed genealogies which have been published. In none of them has any attempt been made to index the pedigrees in Peerages and Baronetages, and consequently the names of many families whose pedigree is only to be found in these are entirely omitted. Mr. Solly's plan enables us without much difficulty to find such descents. He indexes Peers under their peerage title, adding their surname in italics, and Baronets of course under their surname, and to each title adds the date of creation, and, if extinct, the date when it became so, or, if merged, that into which it is merged. If therefore an account of a family is required it will easily be found by referring to any Peerage or Baronetage, as the case may be, published during the time the title was in existence, or to books treating of dormant and extinct titles if not now in being.

Mr. Solly describes his work as "a guide or reference to the existing and extinct Peerages and Baronetages of England, Scotland, and Ireland," and very properly disclaims for it any pretention to be in itself a Peerage or Baronetage, or in any way to take the place of the works of Burke, Lodge, Debrett, and others, adding that it is merely designed "to point out in which of the Peerages or Baronetages any given title is to be found." Unfortunately this is precisely what his book does not do, and this is Mr. Solly's worst and most inexcusable blunder; an omission that ought not to have been made, and one that it is difficult to understand the reason for, if reason there be. He ought to have added to each title references to books from which he derived his information; or, if this would have made his volume too bulky, at all events to have given a list of the Peerages and Baronetages he consulted as a preface or appendix to his book. Such a plan would have rendered it easy to find the various accounts of any Title mentioned, and have made his book of much greater value to the class of students for whose benefit it has been compiled. It would also have been of advantage to have appended a note of interrogation to such titles, and they are numerous, as are of doubtful origin; to those, for example, which Mr. Foster in his new Peerage has relegated to an ultima thule which he denominates "chaos." The Baronetcy of "Cooper of Cogar," already noticed in our pages as long borne but never created, figures in Mr. Solly's Index as fresh as ever, and will no doubt for many years to come like—

The groves of Eden, vanished now so long,
Live in description and look green in song.

Mr. Solly has done much service to genealogists by the publication of this volume, and though it has the omissions we have just mentioned, it must be remembered that it is the first attempt made to furnish a list of Hereditary Titles. So far as it goes it is well done, and the thanks of all interested are due to him. If all the publications of the Index Society are to be as useful as this, and no doubt they will be, we heartily recommend our readers to place their names on its list of subscribers.

ANNALS OF THE PARISH OF ALMONDBURY, YORKSHIRE. By the Rev. CANON HULBERT, M.A. Part I. The Parish Church. Huddersfield: Longmans, Green and Co. 8vo. Price, 4s

Almondbury is a large and important parish in the West Riding, containing thirteen townships, and in 1871 a population of 45,000 souls. Its contiguity to Huddersfield accounts for the large number of inhabitants. The Manor of Almondbury still includes a great part of the town and outskirts of Huddersfield. It was at the time of the Domesday Survey the property of Ilbert de Laey, in whose family it continued for many generations, and after became part of the Duchy of Lancaster. King Stephen built a castle here in 1130. In 1627 the manor was sold by Charles I. to Sir John Ramsden, in whose descendant it is now vested.

This part is devoted to the history of the Church, Chapels, and Schools. Of the two latter there is little to tell, but the history of the church is not only carefully, but entertainingly written. Dedicated to All Saints, it appears to have been first erected in or about 1100, and a few traces of the work of this period remain in the present building, which was finished in 1522. Nothing belonging to this venerable edifice has escaped the searching eye of Canon Hulbert: the bells with their inscriptions, the fabric with its architectural details, and the ornaments, the monuments and arms, the Rectors and Vicars, churchwardens' accounts, benefactions, and last of all the Registers, are carefully noticed and illustrated with much more information than we usually find in books of the kind. There are several illustrations, none however quite worthy of the book, those of the arms being such poor specimens of heraldic drawing that we regret that it has been thought worth while to insert them. In future parts it is proposed to give the history and genealogy of the owners of the soil, a work which, if done as well as the history of the church, and we have no doubt but that it will be, for the author is well fitted for the task, will be of much interest and value to the readers of the 'Genealogist.'

THE ARCHIVES OF THE BRIGGS FAMILY. By SAM. BRIGGS. Cleveland, Ohio, U.S.A., 1880. 8vo.

In our second volume, page 368, we gave a short notice of "A Partial Record of the Descendants of Walter Briggs," stating that Mr. Briggs lead us to hope that it was but the forerunner of a more complete account of the family. This hope is happily realized in the book before us. Everything that the author has been able to collect relative to his name is here printed, together with the authority from whence it is derived. No foolish attempt has been made to join the first American Briggs to some one of the same name in England. This is the highest praise we can give Mr. Briggs, for the plain reason that it is the best guarantee of his honest intentions. Avoiding fear on the one hand and rashness on the other, he has steadily persevered in his search after truth, and not having as yet found the secret for which all genealogists search, the "missing link," he has not, as too many do, attempted to substitute for it a line of descent which will not bear investigation. The book appears to be entirely what its author intends, a guide to those whose opportunities of making further research are greater than his own. His experiences of genealogical enquiries are somewhat naively narrated in the preface, e.g., "A person to whom I applied for information concerning the family, wrote in reply, that 'a Rhode Islander who was anxious to know about his ancestry, ran down one line and brought up in the Narraganset Indians, but did not run out the other line, fearing that he would get into Africa.'"

In the account of English families of the name we notice a few topographical errors, e.g. :—Page 7, line 2, Newsolers should be Neen Sollers; page 16, Barton Lagars should be Barton Lazars. Line 4 (page 10) of the inscription at Salle, which is given in facsimile, is also misread. The responsibility for these errors however probably rests with those who supplied Mr. Briggs with his material, as we are told that the compositor has strictly "followed copy." We wish that Mr. Briggs may live to find the missing link; if he does we shall no doubt hear of him again.

RECORDS OF THE ENGLISH PROVINCE OF THE SOCIETY OF JESUS. Vol. VI. (Supplemental Volume). By HENRY FOLEY, S.J. London: Burns and Oates, 1880. 8vo. Price, 26s.

From a genealogical point of view this is the most valuable volume of Mr. Foley's Records. It is chiefly derived from the transcripts of documents belonging to the English College, Rome, made for the Historical Manuscript Commission, and now deposited in the Public Record Office. Of these the most interesting are the annals of the College, distinguished in this volume as "The Diary of the English College," which contains a list of the Alumni who went there to prepare themselves for work as missionaries to England of the Catholic faith. The entries in this list give the age and quality, with other brief particulars, of each person who entered the College from 1579 to 1783, and are 1341 in number. To nearly all of these entries Mr. Foley has added notes full of biographical particulars of each scholar, with, in most instances, authorities for his statements. Those who know the vast amount of time and labour which such notes require, will see by a most superficial glance at his volume, that genealogists owe him a debt of gratitude for giving them the result of his researches in a field of enquiry hitherto quite untrodden, in a form at once concise, clear, and cheap.

The "Pilgrim-Book" of the English College is a record of no little value. It is in reality, for the times in which it was kept, exactly analogous to the "Visitors' Book," now kept in every Hotel all over Europe. It must be borne in mind that in former times Religious Houses occupied much the same position as resorts for travellers which Inns do now. The English College was under the obligation of receiving and entertaining Englishmen visiting Rome out of devotion, of retaining the richer classes for three days, and the poor for eight. The "Pilgrim Book" gives a record of those so entertained from 1588—1656, and probably contains the names of most of the distinguished Englishmen who visited the Holy City during that period. The first visitor was Thomas, first Lord Arundell of Wardour. John Milton dined in the College in October, 1638, in which year he spent two months in Rome. To the names of many of the visitors the word nobilis is added, showing that they were what we usually call 'gentlemen of coat armour,' but, of course, properly speaking, noble.

Mr. Foley would have made his book more easy of reference had he confined himself to one index. We think he has made a mistake in giving one index to the "Pilgrim Book," and another to the rest of the work.

Our readers will be glad to learn that although the Records are completed with this volume, they are promised another relating to the history of Jesuits, which is likely to equal, if not exceed those for which they are already indebted to Mr. Foley's industry and research. He has in preparation 'A General Catalogue of the Deceased Members of the English Province of the Society of Jesus,' from the earliest time to the year 1879, to which will be added a catalogue of upwards of eight hundred aliases, or by-names, assumed by Members of the Province as a means of protection in times of persecution. This will doubtless prove, as its author asserts, of service in assisting historians and antiquaries to identify the objects of their search, and will add yet another to the obligations we owe him.

BEDFORDSHIRE NOTES AND QUERIES.

The Editor of "the Bedfordshire Times and Independent" has commenced in that paper a series of articles entitled "Bedfordshire Notes and Queries," and we are informed that it is intended, should the project meet with sufficient encouragement, to re-issue them in a separate form, similar in plan to Mr. Blacker's "Gloucestershire Notes and Queries," which we have already noticed. These articles are good evidence that such a publication would be of much more than mere local interest, and we hope in a future number to be able to report that this useful design has been carried into execution. The Editor will be glad to receive any notes on the local topography and genealogy of Bedfordshire which may be considered of sufficient interest to find a place in his Journal.

JOHN ALURED, THE REGICIDE, M.P. FOR HEYDON IN THE LONG PARLIAMENT.—What is known of him after the Restoration? When and where did he die? Administration to "John Alured, late of Beverley, co. York," was granted to Jane, the Relict, 16th November, 1668 (P.C.C.). Is anything known of the family beyond the Pedigree in Foster's Visitations of Yorkshire? The Regicide's only son died, s.p., in 1719, his daughter married William, second son of Henry Pincke, of Kempshott, Hants, and was ancestress of the Pinckes of Sharsted, Kent, extinct in 1833.

PELHAM.

A DOUBTFUL PEERAGE PEDIGREE.

Collins, in his 'Peerage of England,' (4th ed., 1768) under the head of "Pelham-Holles, Duke of Newcastle," says "The lordship of Pelham (co. Herts) is recorded to be part of the possessions of Walter de Pelham in 21 Edw. I, and it is possible his ancestors possessed it before the Conquest, for (!) in Domesday Book it appears that Ralph held of the Bishop of London 2½ hides in Pelham, the possession of two Thanes (i.e., his predecessors). Also, after him, was another Ralph de Pelham, who held of the Bishop of London, a knight's fee in the same county of Hertford, as is evident from the certificates of knights' fees in the reign of Henry II; and Jordan de Pelham, his son, held the knight's fee in the reign of King John."

Before these statements are verified it will be desirable to give the full and exact position of "The lordship of Pelham" at the Domesday survey. The following account is from Clutterbuck's 'History of Hertford,' i, 443:—

"Ralph holds 1 hide and 1 virgate of the Bp. of London in Pelham.

"Pagan holds 1 hide of the Bp. in P.

"Ranulph holds 2½ hides of the Bp. in P.

"Gislebert & Ranulph hold 1 hide & 1 virgate of the Bp. in P.

"Two knights hold 3 hides & 1 virgate of the Bp. in P.

"Eldred holds 1 hide of the Bp. in P.

"Riculf holds 2 hides of the Bp. in P."

Here are nine distinct feudal tenants of the Bishop, who hold what is called the "Lordship of Pelham" between them. The Ralph de Pelham, who temp. Henry II ('Liber Niger,') held a knight's fee in Herts, of the bishop, was probably a direct descendant of one of the aforesaid nine tenants, and most likely of the Ralph, the first on the list, and probably (and probably only), his knight's fee comprised some of the hides "in Pelham." Thus far we have no certain evidence that the Ralph de Pelham of Henry II's time was either a direct descendant of the Ralph of Domesday, or that his knight's fee consisted of lands "in Pelham." Clutterbuck does not pretend to trace the holdings of the nine Domesday tenants, and his first notice after Domesday of the owners of Pelham, is that temp. Hen. III and Edw. I, Simon de Furneaux was lord of "the Pelhams" (i.e., the three existing parishes, Pelham-Furneaux, Pelham-Burnt or Arse, and Pelham-Stocken), and after him, by inheritance, the families of Lee and Newport. In the 'Liber Niger' we find an earlier notice of the family of Furneaux as holding $1\frac{3}{4}$ knight's fee of the Bishop of London in Herts, probably a considerable portion of the Domesday holdings in Pelham. As to Collins' statement that Jordan de Pelham was son of the Ralph of Henry II, it is probable; as in the next reign Jordan de Pelham¹ occurs 11 John in a Fine as holding land in Pelham-Arse, and in the 'Liberate Rolls' (p. 224) a Jordan de Pelham, miles, is mentioned.

Collins, next, leaving the owners of nearly the whole of the thirteenth century to be accounted for, states that "the before mentioned Walter de Pelham died seized of the said manor of Pelham in 1292 (21 Edw. I) and was also possessed of the manor of Cottenham 'in Kent' (Cambridgeshire) and the manor of Twisted in Essex; and left William his son and heir, upwards of the age of 15 years, as also Walter de Pelham, second son." Roberts' 'Calendarium Genealogicum' gives the Inq. p.m. of Walter the son of Wm. de Pelham, who died 21 Edw. I, leaving Alice his widow, and William his son and heir, aged 9 years (not 15), as having lands (terræ in Pelham-Furneaux (not the "said manor of Pelham") as well as the manors of Cottenham and Twisted; and no mention is made of any second or younger son.

Thus we find in Collins' first half page a series of assumptions, unjustifiable inferences, and unfounded or unproved statements, enough to discredit or to render us suspicious of all he says afterwards. The next half page indeed is amenable to the same criticism, but we must go through with it, ab ovo usque ad malum, till we arrive at a stage in his narrative, where he cites abundant and unquestionable evidence; and there we shall leave him.

The imaginary Walter de Pelham, alleged second son of Walter, qui ob. 21 Edw. I, he now brings into Sussex, and calling him "brother" of the young heir, æt. 9, says that he was a grantee of certain specified lands in Hailsham in that county, and that the deed was dated at Hailsham 28 Edw. I. Here we have a specimen of the utter absence of ordinary criticism which characterized the pre-scientific genealogies. Seven years after the aforesaid Inquisition we find a younger brother (Walter) of the heir, then æt. 16, party to a deed! But perhaps to make this consistent, the age of the young heir was said to be 15 instead of 9, which would just make Walter of age 28 Edw. I, supposing his birth followed that of his elder brother in the next year. It must be here remarked, however, that Collins' statements from the time of Hen. II are "ex stemmate facto A.D. 1632 per Joh. Philipot Somerset feical," which compilation of Philipot may be put on a par with a similar performance by the same hand, attempting to show by reckless assertions, fallacious and defective reasoning, that the noble family of Finch was in the paternal line descended from the much nobler and antient family of Fitz Herbert.

But revenons a nos moutons. The Hailsham deed is said to be "ex evident. in stemmate prædicta." Doubtless such a deed existed, and was before Philipot, for we have evidence at this time of the existence of a family of Pelham in East Sussex; but the old genealogists thought nothing of changing names, and Walter may be a wilful misreading for some other christian name.

We are next told, "when this Walter died I don't find, but Thomas de Pelham his son and heir (?) was witness to a dateless deed of lands in Waldron, and was living 2 Edw. II, as appears by another deed." Thus, 2 Edw. II (1309), Walter, who was under 9 years of age in 1291, becomes in 18 years father of an adult son! Furthermore, "Another Thomas de Pelham (son of the former, as Philipot, Somerset Herald asserts) is mentioned in a deed dated at Warbleton, 1346, and left issue a son John de Pelham (which may be true) which John de Pelham was a person of great fame in the reign of Edward III." Here we come to the first proved lineal ancestor, and a distinguished one, of a long line of no less distinguished descendants, the Pelhams of Sussex; and henceforward Collins' account is interesting and trustworthy, being based on historical and documentary evidence.

The attempt of Philipot to derive the Pelhams of Sussex from those of Herts we have now seen breaks down on ground of his own choosing; and we may be assured he did his best to accomplish that object. There may be for all that a connection between the two families; but there is no evidence or even presumption of it whatever. There are no signs from Inq. p.m. or otherwise that the Pelhams of Herts and adjoining counties had any property in Sussex; and no circumstances are given to make it probable that the Pelhams of Sussex by inheritance or marriage were connected with those of Herts, or that a branch migrated from one county into the other. The family deriving their name from Pelham in Herts does not appear to have been a distinguished one, if we except three members of some rank, the Ralph of the 'Liber Niger,' Sir Jordan de Pelham, temp. John, and Peter de Pelham, Sheriff of Cambridgeshire, 2 Hen. III. Besides these we find in the public records scattered notices of the name in Herts, Essex, and Cambridgeshire, but none indicating ownership of any considerable manor or estate for a succession of generations. Nor does the name occur in any roll of arms, nor is any coat attributed to it in the heraldic dictionaries.

We will now enquire what may have been the real origin of the Sussex family. We find the name in Sussex as early as 21 Edw. I (the date of the death of Wm. de Pelham ut ante). In the Subsidy Rolls of that date Thomas de Pelham is rated at 2s. for property in Warbleton, where the family for generations subsequently had lands; and a Ralph de Pellham occurs in a Fine the 10th year of the same reign, as owner of property in the same parish.

It is always the laudable endeavour of genealogists to hook on the first of a family emerging from obscurity to some family of the same or similar name in the same or another county. Hence there being found no Pelhams in Sussex earlier than Edward I, it was sought to connect them with the more ancient family of the same name in Herts. But as a mere guess, this is always a perilous genealogical experiment; for to say nothing of there being several places in England spelt exactly alike at present, the spelling centuries ago was extremely various, which renders a hap-hazard identity in the latter case most uncertain, whilst in the former the uncertainty is not much less. Thus we are told¹ "that the family of Pakington appears to have assumed the surname from one of the Pakingtons in Staffordshire, Warwickshire or Leicestershire." There is a Stapleton in Shropshire and another in Yorkshire, both giving names to distinct families. It might well be supposed that the ancient family of Babington was the only one "of that ilk;" yet we are informed² "there are in England at least two places of the name of Babington, one in Somersetshire and one in Northumberland. Besides these is a place called Bebington in Cheshire, the lords of which converted their territorial appellation into Babington, and were ancestors to a family now flourishing in Ireland and elsewhere under the latter name." Again, Mr. Lower tells us³ that the family of Bellingham descends from Alan de Bellingham of Bellingham in Northumberland, temp. William I. In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries a younger branch became widely extended in Sussex, and in that county there existed contemporaneously with it a distinct [yeomanry] family of Bellingham, who seem to have borrowed their name from Belingeham, a manor near Hastings mentioned in Domesday. And the names Howard, Hord, Haward, Heyward, Hereward, Heywood, Howarth, &c., are constantly interchangeably spelt in old registers and documents, and every bearer of these names hopes to hook on to the illustrious family of Howard.

Enough has now been said to show that any mere conjecture to connect one family with another bearing the same or a resembling name is utterly valueless, unless there are strong circumstances to justify the attempt. We have seen that there are no such circumstances pointing to a connection of the Pelhams of Sussex with those of Herts. Accordingly, we will now examine the circumstances of the early Pelhams of Sussex with those of two or three families of the same county bearing resembling names.

² Nichols' 'Topographer and Genealogist,' i, 133.

³ 'Patronymica Britannica.'

First, we find early in East Sussex the name of Pulham. Wm. de Pulham and Richard de Pulham occur 20 Edw. I. as owners in the settlement of the new town of Winchelsea.¹ Of this family, 20 Hen. VI, Goddard Pulham was Mayor and M.P. for Winchelsea, and was also bailiff of Great Yarmouth. Now there is a Pulham in Norfolk, which doubtless gave name to this family.² And the name is met with temp. Edw. III. in Winchelsea. Contemporaneous with the Pulhams was the family of Paulin. 1236, Thomas, son of Godfrey Paulin, was Jurat of Winchelsea. 1243, Thomas, son of Godfrey de Winchelsea [? Paulin] occurs. 1312, Henry Pawlen is met with.³ 10 Edw. II., Rex concessit Roberto de Paulyn de Winchelsea ballivam de W. Rye, cumpert.⁴ In 'Sussex Arch. Coll.' (vol. xxiii, p. 31) reference is made to Godfrey's chantry in Winchelsea; and elsewhere (vi, 69) it is called the chantry of Godfrey Pulham. Paulin⁵ and Pulham may have been different families, and the one name not corrupted from the other; but there are two notices of the Paulins that are significant in connection with the Pelhams: 1, The Prior of Michelham, 16 Edw. II, had licence to hold five acres of Henry Paulyn in Hailsham⁶ [where we have seen Walter de Pelham had property contemporaneously.] 2, Nicholas Paulin of Merle was first husband of Godeline Pissenden; her sister and coh. Joanna marrying Vincent Finch.⁷ Now Collins says, Sir John Pelham, (temp. Edw. III.), the head of the proved pedigree, "had certain lands and houses in Winchelsea in marriage with Joan, dau. of Vincent Finch." Here we begin to find important circumstances respecting the early Pelhams of Sussex. The Finches were a mercantile family of Winchelsea, as were the Alards, Palernes, and Salernes, with whom they intermarried. We know not whether Sir John Pelham was married before his exploits in France or after, but he chooses a wife from one of the mercantile families of East Sussex, among whom we have seen were the Pulhams and Paulyns. These facts at least are suggestive.

We now proceed to notice another family of East Sussex of the name of Pepplesham. This family derived its name from a manor between Bexhill and St. Leonards, called in Domesday

Pilesham, and now Pebsham. The name is frequently met with in Thorpe's 'Catalogue of Battle Abbey Charters,' and in other early documents relating to East Sussex. One of the family, temp. Hen. III, was Sir Hugh de Pepplesham. Margery, da. and coh. of Simon Pepplesham, mar. 1st William Battisford, of Battisford in Warbleton, by which match there were two coh., Isabel, ux. Sir Thomas Fynes, and Alice, ux. Sir William Echingham, and secondly, Robert Cralle of Cralle, in Warbleton, by whom there were three coh., one of whom Isabel, mar. Vincent Finch.¹ We arrive at the arms borne by Pepplesham by monumental memorials. In Echingham Church are, or were, the arms of Echingham impaling quarterly 1 and 4 Battisford, 2 and 3 "3 birds like geese" for Pepplesham.² In Frinsted Church, co. Kent, was a shield for Finch of 6 quarterings: 1 Finch, 2 Passenden (Sable, a fess between 3 pelicans Or.) 3 Cralle (6 mascles in fess) 4 Pepplesham (Sa. 3 ducks Arg. in pale) and in Nettledsted Church, Battisford impaling 3 ducks Arg. in pale, and the latter coat alone, the birds being placed 2 and 1; whilst in Brenchley Church, Battisford occurs impaling 3 ducks in pale (ibid.)

The way is now paved for a consideration of the arms borne by Pelham of Sussex, as calculated in connection with the foregoing facts, to elucidate the Sussex origin of the family. These arms are, and have been from time immemorial, three pelicans, that is from Rich. II. downwards. In Waldron Church, Azure, 3 pelicans (close) Argent remain in one of the windows. Laughton Church became, after the dissolution of the monasteries, the burial place of the family, and on one of the spandrils of the doorway of this church are engraved the arms of Pelham, 3 pelicans (close) vulning themselves in pale. This and two later forms of the arms are figured in Mr. Lower's paper in Sussex Arch. Coll. (iii, 213) the second being the 3 birds, 2 and 1, from a sculptured stone at Robertsbridge Abbey, and the third, with wings expanded as now borne.

A feasible conjecture is now allowable, viz., that the name of Pepplesham became Pelsham, and then Pelham, and that the ducks or shovellers assumed the form of pel-icans as a canting coat; or, if the change from Pepplesham to Pelham be considered not so easy or likely as that from Pulham to Pelham, we may find a more direct and probable origin for the coat borne by the early Pelhams.

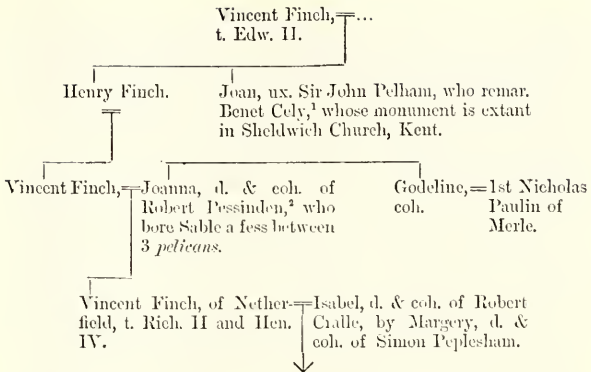

According to the elaborate genealogy of Finch compiled by Philipot, Somerset Herald, before-mentioned,³ the following portion of the pedigree bears on our subject:—

² 'Sussex Arch. Coll.,' ix, 353.

³ Philipot's 'Church Notes,' Harl. MSS. 3917, p. 21.

⁴ Howard's 'Misc.,' 1st series, ii, 328.

This pedigree is thus given in Collins' account of the Finch family, and in Berry's 'Sussex Genealogies,' but is by no means reliable. Sir William Burrell, who had access to the deeds of the landowners of the county (see Burr. MSS., Brit. Mus., under 'Netherfield,') gives this different account:—

But this account may be wrong in assigning Joan, who married Sir John Pelham, to the first wife, instead of to Joan, the second wife. If by the latter, we have at once what we want—a reason for Sir John Pelham bearing the pelicans for arms; for it was the custom then for a novus homo to take a coat founded on that of some immediate ancestor, or that of his wife. In such a case his ancestral name might have been Pulham, as there are no arms to be found for that name. Be this however as it may, the name of Pelham was obscure in Sussex temp. Edw. I and II¹ till temp. Edw. III the deeds of Sir John Pelham first made it illustrious. It is not met with at this period in the Battle Abbey Charters, where the names of Alard, Finch, and Pepplesham constantly occur, nor in the public records. Unless we assume Pepplesham to have become Pelham, Sir John Pelham was unconscious of ancestral coat armour, and when he became famous in chivalry, had to bear the insignia of the rank of knighthood. If he were conscious of descent from the Pelhams of Herts he would have assumed or resumed the arms which that family bore: and that they bore some arms is pretty certain from the rank of some of its early members, whom we have noticed, and for another reason to which we must now draw attention.

² This name is variously spelt Passenden, Pissenden, Pillesden, and Picklesden. Amongst the 'Gentry of Kent,' 1433, is John Pillesden of Tenterden; Wm. Engham of Engham, temp. Hen. VII, mar. Joan, da. & h. of Thomas Picklesden of Picklesden; Tho. Petlesden of Tenterden, by will dated 1 Dec. 1463, desires to be buried in the chancel of the Church of St. Catherine in Tenterden; Edward Guldeford, Esq., of Hadden, temp. Hen. VI, mar. Juliana, d. & h. of Stephen Pillesden (Hasted). In Wittersham Church there was a memorial in one of the windows to one of the family (Ibid). The family of Finch had a branch settled in Tenterden, and they gave the name of Finch-den to their manor. We may well conceive a branch of Pepplesham, or Pelsham, settling in that parish too, and adding the suffix -den to their name, imposed it as a territorial designation, resulting in the various forms we have seen. Thus the ducks of Pepplesham, or Pelsham, would take the allusive form of Pelicans; or, it may be the latter were the original charges of their shield, and in time became undistinguishable from ducks.

Collins states that Sir John Pelham, son of the first, sealed a deed dated 20 Ric. II with these arms quarterly, viz. 3 pelicans, and a fess between two chevrons. This, as a general rule, would imply that his mother was an heiress, and bore the quartered coat; but we have seen that she was no heiress. Now the anonymous author of 'The Norman People'—a work of some ingenuity and research, but of extravagant statements and conjectures, and as a whole utterly untrustworthy—under the name of "Pelham" gives as the arms of the ancient family of Herts, the precise coat quartered on the above seal, which he says was founded on that of Peele, who were their feudal suzerains. The Pelhams of Herts and Camb. certainly had some feudal relations with that family, and also with that of De L'Isle who bore a similar coat, and it is therefore not improbable (though no authority is given for it, nor is it found in any roll or ordinary) that by marriage into one of these families such a coat was early assumed by some Pelham of Pelham. But if this was the ancient coat, how is it that it is borne in the second quarter by Sir John Pelham, and not in the first? We know that it was the custom in those times often to take the arms of the wife or mother, if an heiress, and to relegate the old paternal ancestral coat to the second quarter. But that could not have been the case here, nor did the second Sir John Pelham marry a lady who bore three pelicans, as we shall presently see. This custom of bearing two coats, quarterly, the new and the old (called by heralds "ancient") was imitated by families who fancied they had discovered their patronymic was something else at an early period, and their arms not their original and ancient bearings.¹ Thus the family of Finch bear Fitzherbert quarterly, on the presumption (which has never been proved) that an alias of an early ancestor being Herbert, it meant a derivation from the old and knightly family of Fitz Herbert. This practice, however, we are not accustomed to carry back so far as the time of Richard the Second, when heraldic usage was fenced round by penalties for misappropriation and unlawful assumption. Yet we can draw no other conclusion from the remarkable and suggestive seal in question used by Sir John Pelham than that some herald of the day persuaded him he was a scion of the ancient Hertfordshire line, then probably sunk into obscurity, and that his paternal arms of the three pelicans having become associated with his distinguished father he could not disuse them, and so bore Pelham "ancient" in the second quarter. For it is remarkable that the seal of the third Sir John Pelham (in succession) does not continue the use of the fess and two chevrons, but in the second quarter (the first being the three pelicans), gives this coat, viz., ermine on a fess three crowns, which is supposed to be the coat of Crownell,² and therefore that of his mother an heiress. Nor have the fess and two chevrons been used by the family at all ever since, the second quarter being occupied by 2 buckles.³

It must not be forgotten to refer to the statement of Collins, that "the pelicans the arms of this family were painted in the church of Pelham." This probably arose from the fact mentioned by Clutterbuck (iii, 458), that on the oak roof of the church of Pelham-Furneaux there was a shield quarterly, 1 and 4 Argent a chief indented Gules; 2 and 3, Gules 3 swans Argent. Nothing else resembling the pelicans is mentioned by Clutterbuck, as found in either of the three churches. Mr. Lower ('Sussex Arch. Coll.,' iii, 213) repeats Collins' statement, and adds that the badge of the Sussex Pelhams (the buckle) occurs sculptured on stone twice on the church of Thandridge near Ware (which is engraved), and after remarking on the proximity of Thundridge to Pelham (which is not the case), accounts for it by the fact that Thundridge church belonged to the Priory of Ware, and that Sir John Pelham may be supposed to have obtained a grant of the profits of this confiscated alien priory. And Mr. Blaauw, in an article in vol. vii of the same Collections, p. 65, remarks that a new church was then (1854) being built at Thundridge, but that "the west tower, on which the Pelham badge is shewn, will be preserved." Whether or not the sculptured figure may have been meant for the Pelham badge, as an isolated circumstance, it affords no countenance to the supposed connection of the Pelhams of Sussex and Herts. And here it may be proper to notice Mr. Blaauw and Mr. Lower's idea that "the manor of Pelham" belonged to Sir John Pelham. In the list of Sir John Pelham's manors taken 1403 (given by Collins), it is true, Pelham manor is valued at £6, but this could have been only some lands in Sussex which got his name;¹ for, 1413, Sir John Pelham gave lands in Warbleton to the priory there; and 5 Hen. VI lets to farm to the same convent his manor of Pelham, and gives other lands ('Sussex Arch. Coll.' xiii, 155).

² Figured in Sussex Arch. Coll., iii, 220. In the Vis. of Sussex 1634, the lady is said to be Alice the d. and h. of Crowall.

³ "In the pedigree drawn up at the Visitation of Sussex in 1634, two buckles with a part of the belt attached are quartered as an "augmentation." This is the first instance of the formal recognition of the buckle by the Heralds, for in the previous Visitation, temp. Eliz., the pelicans only are entered. The addition of the belts was displeasing to one branch of the family. Among the Burrell MSS. is an original letter written from London 10th July, 1620, by Sir Thomas Pelham to his "good cosen" Sir Wm. Pelham, in which he says, "I had conferred with a skilful herald but that I did so much dislike the altering and buying and selling of arms for Gayne. They have added to the buckle a part of the girdle, which I did never see in all the seals of arms I have, or on any escutcheon." (Sussex Arch. Coll., iii, 220, being an article on the Pelham Badge by M. A. Lower).

This article would be incomplete without a critical notice of a paper in vol. xxiv. of the 'Sussex Archaeological Collections,' entitled 'The Norman Origin of the Family of Pelham.' It is written by the late Mr. M. A. Lower, who had a life-long connection with Sussex, wrote numerous other papers for the Collections, especially relative to the Pelhams; with materials contributed by Mr. E. Avenel, whom Mr. Lower introduces to his readers as a gentleman, "who perhaps more than any other living man has made the history of our oldest families his study." Under such high auspices we naturally expect to find the subject treated elaborately and with great research and accuracy; and to find at a recent date (1872) a critical review of what had been hitherto done, and valuable additions and corrections made from the ample stock of materials now accessible to the genealogist. But, alas! this joint production is worse than that of Collins, written a century ago,—more full of assumptions and unwarranted inferences, repeating all the errors of Collins, without the slightest addition to our knowledge of the early Pelhams of Sussex, with no new endeavour to connect them with those of Herts, and, what is worse, an egregious failure to derive the Pelhams from the Norman family of Bee, the thesis of the paper.

It is the task of the genealogical critic of the present day not only to expose the errors of the old genealogists; but the Sisyphæan labour is cast upon him of constantly denouncing the grievous blunders of the existing school—the neo-genealogists—who repeat the mistakes of their predecessors, and create new ones of their own in abundance. This comes of novices handling a subject in which their training and experience are alike deficient.

Here is a specimen to begin with of the way in which the subject is approached in the paper in question. "It appears" (to use Mr. Lower's words) "continues Mr. Avenel, that the Pelhams were originally a branch of the Barons of Bee or Bee-Crespin in Normandy, though (?), from the very early adoption of the name Pelham, and the number of branches of the family, it is not very easy to prove the identity of the Pelhams and Bees." This is an uneasy apology for a preface. We are then treated to a page about the early Bees, in which the qualifying words "appears" and "probably" occur too frequently to please the genealogist. Then we are introduced to "Ralph (de Bee) of Pelham, in whose line the male succession of the English branches of De Bee seems to have vested." In 1086 this noble (! the tenant of a hide of land) held from Geoffry de Bech his brother certain lands specified in Herts and Cambridgeshire. We have seen in the early part of this article what "Ralph" held "in Pelham," and that his descendants could not be traced except conjecturally;¹ yet here it is asserted that he was a De Bee, that Geoffry de Bee was his brother, and that he held other possessions at the Domesday survey, and all without any proof or presumption being offered. Then come a host of stray De Bees, who are all complacently affiliated, and a fabular pedigree is given of several descents embodying the belief above-mentioned, "that Ralph de Bee (of Pelham) in whose line the male succession of the English branches of De Bee seems to have vested." But here is what a less confident writer says as to these statements. After remarking that the only members of the family mentioned in Domesday Book were Walter de Bee, an under tenant in Bucks, and Gosifrid de Bee in Herts, says, "In Herts all traces of the name

abruptly and unaccountably cease with Gosifrid de Bee himself ; but in the next generation frequent traces of it occur in Cambridgeshire and Norfolk."¹

Then the writer in the Sussex volume, after noticing the Ralph de Pelham of the 'Liber Niger,' remarks, "His son appears to have been Hugh de Pelham, whose sons were 1, Ralph Fitz Hugh, whose widow Alicia in 1199 brought a suit for dower against Walter de Pelham ; 2, Helias de Pelham, who died before 1199, to whom Walter de Pelham his brother was heir ; 3, Walter ; 4, Petrus de Bee, who in 1194 was defendant in a suit for Middleton, co. Camb., which Ralph de Bee or de Pelham had in 1086 held from Picot of Cambridge. This shows the connection between the Pelhams and De Bees (!) Peter appears in 1218 as Peter de Pelham." The 'Record' publications are quoted in support of these statements ; but, will it be believed, they afford no countenance whatever to their truth ? Here they are :—

"Alicia que fuit uxor Radulfi fil. Hugh claims dower against various persons in Horsey, co. Camb. inter al. against Walter de Pelham one third part of 5 acres in Horsey . . . (here there is an hiatus in the record) Robertus . . . says that Helias frater meus tenuit," etc. ('Rot. Cur. Regis').

4 John, a fine was levied between Ranulph Picot pl. and Peter de Pelham def., of 2 carucates in Cottenham, co. Camb. (p. 302). 8 Ric. 1, a fine was levied between Robert Picot pl. and Peter de Bech def., of 3 knight's fees, co. Camb. (p. 262). Thus because a Picot appears in each case, Peter de Bee and Peter de Pelham were the same person !

Hardy's 'Rotuli Lit. Claus' are quoted to substantiate the statement that "Peter de Bee appears in 1218 as Peter de Pelham," when in fact all that we glean from these Records is that 2 Hen. III Peter de Pelham was Sheriff of Cambridgeshire ! After some more instances of non sequitur, the apologetic strain is continued : "I do not as yet see with certainty," observes Mr. Avenel [sic loquitur Lower] "the name of Walter's son or sons, who lived in the reign of Henry III. Probably the Walter Pelham who is mentioned in the peerages as living in 1265 may have been one ; but several members of the family are mentioned about 1272. There is some chronological difficulty which enquiry will remove." [?] Very shortly after Mr. Lower winds up in this triumphant fashion : "From the last mentioned Walter, who was Lord of Pelham, the surviving branches descended as the peerages state." [?]

We have now gone over the salient points of this pretentious paper ; it is deplorable that such crude and purely speculative and illogical ideas should be published at all ; but from the auspices under which the paper appears, no doubt it will "go down" with nine-tenths of the members of the Sussex Archaeological Society for a generation to come. Such worthless reasoning as we have criticised might be employed to trace any family up to the most illustrious names recorded in Domesday Book. Indeed, the faintest resemblance of many of our ordinary surnames to Norman names is made the ground by the author of 'The Norman People' before referred to, for the doctrine that the majority of Englishmen are of Norman lineage! And the author of that mischievous work, in the article "Pelham" therein, and otherwise, exhibits so many evidences of a kindred spirit with the writer whom we have just been combating, that the same debased mint seems to have produced the spurious coinage uttered by both; and it is to be hoped for the credit of genealogical literature we shall have no more of the same type.

Since this article was written I have looked into Bloomfield and Parkyns' 'History of Norfolk' for information about the family of Pulham. They say (8vo. ed., v, 400), the parishes of Pulham St. Mary and St. Mary Magdalen contain over 6000 acres of land; that the manor belonged to the Bishop of Ely from the time of the Saxons [as the manor of Pelham, co. Herts, did at the Domesday Survey to the Bishop of London,¹] and that the bishop purchased thirty acres of Maul de Pulham; that 1304 Alice, daughter of Nicholas de Pulham, had a good estate here; that in 1481 died brother John Pulham, a learned Austin friar of Yarmouth convent; and that in 1445, 54, 59, and 65, Haman Pulham was bailiff and mayor of Yarmouth. And there are some early notices of the name in the 'Rotuli Finium.' It is not improbable that such a family bore coat armour. Now in Pulham was the manor of Hemenhales which was early owned by the knightly family of that name, who, we are informed, bore the arms of Fitz-Walter their chief lord, viz., a fess and two chevrons with the addition of three escallops on the fess. As the Fitz-Walter feudal influence was considerable in the district, possibly Pulham bore a coat based on the bearings of that great family. Gilbert Peche, temp. John, marrying a daughter of this potent house assumed their coat, a fess and two chevrons. We thus see it possible if not probable that both Pelham of Pelham and Pulham of Pulham bore similar bearings ultimately derived from the same source, and the fess and two chevrons on the seal of Sir John Pelham may after all have been the coat of an ancestor called Pulham. It is singular that the two families of Stapleton of distinct origin, before noticed, each bore a lion rampant.

J

DE BRAOSE FAMILY.

CHAPTER IV.

WILLIAM DE BRAOSE—MAUD DE ST. VALERIE.

This William was a most important personage with King John; although evidently fond of fighting, he does not appear to have accompanied King Richard to the crusades, but to have been left at home, and very busy in Wales, until he went with King John into Normandy to fight Philip, King of France, or possibly he was in that country before the war broke out, as it is reported in one history that he was taken prisoner, together with Prince Arthur, by King John. His possessions in England and Wales were immense: Lord of Brecon, Colwyn (which he is said to have built in honour of his wife Maud), Paynes, Builth, Grosso Monte, Skenefrith, Lantelio, and other castles in Wales; from King John he received Gowerland, in addition to which, all the castles and manors in Sussex and other English counties had descended to him from his ancestors; he claimed the barony of Toteneis, as his inheritance from Aanor de Toteneis, wife to his grandfather Philip de Braose, and co-heir with her sister who married a Tracy, to the baronies of Totneis and Berstaple, the former of these two baronies was (see ante p. 138) given, for some unexplained reason, by William Rufus to Henry de Nonant. In 1 John, William de Braose offers the King £100 sterling to have judgment between him and Henry de Nonant as to Toteneis and its appurtenances; he will give the King £100 if he lose the suit, 700 marks of silver if he gain it.¹ In 6 John, he gives the King 300 cows, 30 bulls, and 10 marks, that his imparlance against Henry de Nonant may be expedited.² The next year there was a final concord between the parties.³

We may conclude that he succeeded his father about 1187, in which year he paid scutage for lands in Devonshire,⁴ see ante p. 139. He was, in 7 Ric. I. [1195-6], justice itinerant in Staffordshire, was bailiff of Caermarthen, and was sheriff for the county of Hereford for the last seven years of that King's reign, and at the commencement of King John's reign also was in much favour, as is shown particularly by the special charter he received from the King in his second year, exempting the lands of the honour of Braiose from the interference of any of the King's sheriffs or other officers, and giving the sole jurisdiction there to William himself, on condition that whensoever the King's justices itinerant went into the baileywick of Falaise, they should go to Braiose and there determine the Pleas of the Crown, and that William should supply them with necessaries for one day at Braiose. In this same year he received by charter (Roll, 2 John, m. 15, dated 12 January, 1201), the honour of Limerick in Ireland, in the same manner as King Henry II. gave it to Philip de Braosa his uncle; and by another charter (ib. m. 33, dated 3 June, 1200), he is to have all the lands which he has and which he shall acquire upon the King's Welsh enemies in increase of his barony of Radnor, saving Cardigan, &c.; but before this time William, in 1 Ric. I, made a composition (£477 6s. 8d.) for the Honour of Berstaple, respecting which, in 6 Ric. I, he had a suit with Oliver de Tracy (Abb. Plac. i, 5a).

In 1198, (Roger de Hoveden) the Justiciary of England Geoffrey Fitz-Piers, afterwards Earl of Essex, proceeded to Wales with a large army to succour the people of William de Braose, whom Wenhunwin [Owen] the brother of Cadwallan had besieged in the castle belonging to Maud, wife of William (Colwyn or Maud's Castle) and there fought a battle (Elvael), in which the Welsh, though very numerous, were defeated, and 3,700 of them slain.

In the Brut-y-Tynsogion (or Chronicles of the Princes) it is asserted that Prince Rhys, in the reign of Richard I, compelled the inhabitants of the castle of Colwyn to surrender, and burned it, and then attacked Pains Castle in Elvael, the garrison of which he also compelled to surrender, but that after obtaining it there was an agreement between him and De Braos, in consequence of which he relinquished the castle in peace. To this last, tradition, however, gives another and more romantic legend, for it ascribes the attack on Pains Castle to have been made by Prince Rhys from the following cause. That whilst a beautiful girl, daughter of one of the descendants of the old native regali, residing at Ys-cryrn (now Skeen), in the neighbouring parish of Llandilo-Graban, was disporting herself with her female attendants on the lake at Bwehllyn, some two miles from Pains castle, William de Braose with his followers returning from hunting espied her, and William, enamoured of her beauty, caused the whole party to be carried to the castle, and there detained them. They were sought for by their sorrowing relatives in vain, though Pains castle and its Norman lord were suspiciously watched, with the result at last of obtaining, by night, a signal from the window of the young lady herself, in the shape of a token of her house held over a lighted candle, which, confirming her relatives' suspicions as to the place of her incarceration, they at once petitioned Prince Rhys, then besieging Radnor, to rescue his relative and dependant, which, as soon as he had demolished Radnor castle, he proceeded to do. On his arrival at Pains castle, William de Braose pretended not to know for what purpose he had come, but at night, on seeing his relative's signal repeated, Prince Rhys announced his intention of storming the castle unless she was at once restored. No notice was taken of this threat, and a strong detachment from Court Evan Gwynne, a dependency of the castle, coming to the assistance of the garrison, De Braose marched out and attacked Prince Rhys, on which a most bloody battle ensued, turning the Bachowey waters into a crimson stream. In the end Prince Rhys proved victorious; his fair relative was discovered and released, and the castle was much despoiled. He himself withdrew, his object being attained, and died in the following year.¹

The description of this Prince Rhys' character is such a fine one that it deserves to be recorded.

"An Achilles in strength, a Nestor in kindness, a Hector in prudence, a Hercules in gallantry, a Paris in beauty, Ulysses in speech, a Solomon in wisdom, an Ajax in mind, and the foundation of all excellencies."

This William was very frequently among the witnesses to charters of King John.

In 2 John he received by charter (Roll 2 John, m. 20, dated 19 November, 1200), a confirmation of a grant made to him by Walter de Lacy, who on that date married Margaret, one of his daughters, viz., that he would not dispose of any of his property in England or Normandy without his (William's) consent. William appears to have been in favour with King John until the 9th year of his reign, when suddenly some great quarrel arose between them, before this happened in 7 John (Pipe Roll, Herefordshire in Wales), he renders account of 800 marks and three "dextrariis, 5 chascour, 24 senz and 10 leporariis,"¹ for having in fee and inheritance to him and his heirs the castles of "Grosso Monte, Skenefrith and Lantelio," with their appurtenances, for which he paid £100 a year.

There are three causes given in explanation of his disagreement with the King; the first would seem a mere pretence, if it ever was alleged, viz., that he had carried war into Wales and killed above 3000 men in the battle of Elvel.

The second is a more probable one (Roger de Wendover), viz., that King John, fearing after the interdict of the Pope that he should be excommunicated and his nobles absolved from allegiance, required of those of whom he was suspicious, their sons or near relatives as hostages; when the demand was made of William, his wife Matilda, with the rash impulsiveness of a woman, took the reply out of his mouth, and said to the King's messengers, "I will not deliver my sons to your Lord, king John; because he basely murdered his nephew Arthur, whom he ought to have taken care of honourably." Her husband rebuked her and said, "Thou hast spoken like a foolish woman against our Lord the King, for if I have offended him in anything, I am and shall be ready to give satisfaction to my Lord, and that without hostages, according to the decision of his court and of my fellow barons, if he will fix on a time and place for my so doing."

² These four words are said to mean "light horse, hunters, beagles and greyhounds." See Cowell's Interpreter, which refers to this very passage.

The third cause (Hearnii, 377) is in the King's own manifesto (recorded in the red book of the Exchequer²), which attributes his outlawry to the non-payment of 5000 marks which he owed for the province of Munster in Ireland, and of five years' arrears of the ferm of Limerick, and to divers subsequent rebellious acts and breaches of engagements by himself and his wife Matilda, which are particularised in the manifesto.

The second cause was, however, the more probable one of the three, especially as William is stated³ to have been taken prisoner by King John in France with Prince Arthur [1202-3], and though he was released from confinement the king appears ever after to have regarded him with an eye of suspicion and jealousy. Moreover, I think a not unlikely cause of King John quarrelling with William may be found in Inq. p.m., 26 Edw. III, 2nd Nos. 66; which quotes a trial taking place before the Justices of Common Pleas in Easter, 6 Edw. I, between William de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, Plaintiff, and William de Breuse, Defendant, concerning the descent of the Castle of Sweynsey and the land of Gower. William de Breuse states that the land of Gower was granted to his ancestor William de Breuse by King John by charter in the fourth year of his reign on 24 Feb. [1203], and that therefore he cannot answer without the King. The Earl, in answer, says that he can answer as to the Castle of Sweynsey, which he claims is not mentioned in the said charter; the Earl also says that the said Charter was made in Normandy in the time of the war between the King of France and King John, on account of William threatening to depart from him and to return to England, the King being terrified by the said war; and that seizin of the land of Gower was never delivered to the said William. Now this must have been just before the murder of Prince Arthur, which King John perpetrated in Rouen Castle, 3rd April, 1203, and possibly William de Braose expostulated with the King on this vile act, and the latter to bribe him to silence granted him the land of Gower by the above charter.

It is said¹ that after Matilda's refusal of hostages she repented her rash speech when it was too late, and strove in vain to propitiate Queen Isabella by rich gifts. Among other offerings she sent the Queen a present of a herd of 400 cows and one beautiful bull. This peerless herd was white as milk,² all but the ears, which were red. However, the King's deadly wrath was not averted by this extraordinary present, but after some time, during which the contest between the parties continued and some abortive attempts at reconciliation were made,³ King John being in Ireland in pursuit of his enemies, Matilda, in endeavouring to escape to Scotland, was, with her son William,⁴ seized by Duncan de Carrie and delivered up to the King. Again fruitless negotiations took place, at the end of which Matilda and her son were sent to Windsor Castle, and there were barbarously starved to death in the year 1210.

Her husband fled to Shoreham, and escaped thence⁵ in the habit of a beggar ("tanquam medicus") into France, and died in 1212 at Corbeil. His body was taken to Paris and there honourably interred by Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, also an exile, in the Abbey of St. Victor. William had intended to be buried at St. John's, Brecon, as the following charters show⁶ :—

DE BRAOSE FAMILY.

Before we take leave of this member of the family a few words must be said of his imperious and evidently very haughty wife, to whose instigation some of the cruelties of himself and his father should probably be attributed, such as the murder of Sitfyht ap Dynswald by his father in 1178, and in 1196 the most ignominious murder of Trehaern Vaehan, the unfortunate victim being fastened to a horse's tail, dragged through the streets of Brecknock to the gallows and there beheaded and suspended by his feet. She was Maud, the daughter of Reginald de S. Valerie, who died in 1166 (see pedigree), sometimes styled de la Haia, and Leland says she was reputed a witch. In Foxe's 'History of Brecknockshire' she is called the Semiramis of that country. From her parentage it may be legitimately inferred that she was descended from Richard, Duke of Normandy, the grandfather of William the Conqueror. In Wales she was known by the nickname of Moll Walbec, possibly a contraction of Maud Walerie, and is credited with numerous prodigies, one being the restoring of Hay Castle in a single night, carrying the stones in her apron. Another, that whilst she was thus employed one of the stones, some nine feet long and one thick, dropped into her shoe, that at first she did not regard this, but shortly finding it troublesome she indignantly threw it over the river Wye, into Flowes Churchyard in Radnorshire (about three miles off), where it remains to this present day precisely in the position it fell, a stubborn fact, to the utter confusion of all sceptics and unbelievers.

(Thorpe's Lappenburg's 'England.')

Domesday

Walter de S^t Valery had lands in Mid^s and Sussex.Ranulph de S^t Valery had several lordships in Lincolnshire.Duchy of Lancaster, Charters, Box A. No. 5.

Grant by William de Brausa to Walter de Clifford and his heirs of the old and new tement which Earl Roger [Fitz-Walter Earl of Hereford] William's uncle, granted to Walter and which Walter holds of William: to hold in fee and inheritance by the service of 5 knights doing ward 40 days every year in the castle of Brecchen [Brecon]; and to do all the services and aids which William's other knights of the same Honor of Brecchen do to him, &c., &c. Also similar grant of the Castle of Glasbire, reserving the justice of all the men of the said castle and of the land belonging to the Abbot of Gloucester, &c. Walter gave 40 marks of silver.

Amongst the witnesses were Lady Margaret de Bohun, Lady Aanor de St. Valerie [the daughter and heir of Thomas de St. Valerie, who died in 1219], Lady Sibilla de Ferrars [sister to W. de Braose the grantor and wife to Robert Earl of Ferrars], William de Brausa son of the grantor, Philip de Brausa probably uncle to the grantor.

Has seal of William de Breosa—"juvenis."

[There is no date to this grant, but it is assumed to be of the period between 1199 and 1200.]

I think it was probably earlier rather than later than the first date, assuming the witness Philip de Brausa to be the uncle of the grantor, we know that the latter had a grant of the honour of Limeric in 1200, from Charter Roll, 2 John, m. 15, which honour was formerly held by the said Philip, who in 1200 was probably defunct; at the same time it must not be forgotten that the grantor had a son of the name of Philip, who may have been the witness to this charter.

Charters, &c., from Record Office relating to W. de B., died 1212.

The King to the Seneschal of Poitou (Piet) notifying that at the petition of the Lord William de Braūs the King wills that his men at Sorham [Shoreham] who are detained in Poitou (Pictavia), to wit, William son of Alan son of Toni and his fellows shall be delivered. Orders the Seneschal to deliver them with their chattels, and to allow them to depart without hindrance 6 March. Charter Roll, 1 John, m. 26^d [1200.]

Grant and confirmation to William de Braosa and his heirs of the honor of Limeric, in the same manner as King Henry II. gave it to Philip de Braosa, uncle of the said William. Dated 12 January, 2 John [1201.] Charter Roll, m. 15.

Grant and confirmation to same W. de B. of all the lands which he has acquired and which he shall acquire upon the King's Welsh enemies, in increase of his barony of Radnor, saving Cardigan, &c. Dated 3 June [1200.] Charter Roll, 2 John, m. 33.

The King to the Justices, &c., prohibiting them to implead W. de B. or to allow him to be impleaded concerning any of his tenements so long as he shall be in Ireland about his affairs touching the honor of Limerick:—wherefore he has made a fine with the King. Dated 12 Jan. [1201.] Charter Roll, 2 John, m. 16^d.

Confirmation to W. de B. of the grant which Walter de Lasey made to him on the day when he espoused Margaret his wife, daughter of the said William (to wit) that he would not dispose of any of his property in England and Normandy without the consent of the said William. Charter Roll, 2 John, m. 20. 19 November [1200].

Patent Roll, 4 John, m. 8.

Grant to William de Breosa of the custody of the castles of Glamorgan, Gunden and Guer [Gower] 23 Oct. [1202.]

By a charter dated 24 Feb., 4 John, [1203 N.S.] the King granted to this William all the land of Guher, and in 32 Edw. I. is another charter, dated 14 Oct. [1304], just 100 years later, granting an Inspeximus of this early charter, and confirming to another William de Braose, great-great-grandson of the above William, this land of Guher and that he should have the same jurisdictions, royal liberties and free customs in it as Gilbert de Clare, son of Richard de Clare, formerly Earl of Gloucester and Hereford, had in his land of Glamorgan.

Grant to W. de B. and his heirs of Ailmund de Yeng burgess of Hereford and his heirs, and their tenement at Hereford, 7th August. Charter Roll, 5 John, m. 22. [1203.]

Charter by King John to W. de B., granting him all the land which Alan de Trechem(er) held of the king in Gunselve and in Pethenden, to hold to him and his heirs of the king by the service of one knight's fee. Dated at Merton — June, 6 John, m. 12, p. 134. [1204.]

Grant to W. de B. of the castles of "Grosse Monte," Skenefrid, and Lantelio [in Monmouth] as held by Hubert de Burgh, 16th Dec. Charter Roll 7 John, m. 3. [1206.]

PIPE ROLLS, 5 John. Sussex, First Scutage:—William de Braiosa owes 56 marks for the same, "which was required in Devonshire." [These entries also occur under Devonshire, where it is also stated that "W. de B. renders account of £100 for having the custody of the land and heir of Henry de Umframvill, and for having the marriage of the same heir by the Council of the king, and for having the wife of the said Henry to marry. He delivered into the Treasury by the hand of Matilda his wife in the time of king Richard, and now by the King's writ it is allowed to the same William."]

W. de B., twenty marks and one palfrey for having the king's confirmation as in the Roll of the 3rd year, and 5000 marks for having the honor of Limerick as in same Roll.

Second Scutage of K. John. W. de B. owes 20 marks of a loan, also £14 14s. 4d. of the same scutage, which were required in Devonshire (see sup.) Amercements by Justices. For pardons to W. de B., 25 marks.

W. de B., £1000, to be paid at the king's summons for having the widow of Hugh Bard[olf] to the behoof of one of his sons (pro habenda uxorem que fuit Hug' Bard' ad opus ejusdam filiorum suorum.)

Fines and Scutages of Knights of the Fourth Scutage:—Amongst those acquitted by writs is William de Braiosa.

PIPE ROLL, 7 JOHN. Is repetition of the foregoing payments due from W. de B., and the following one in Herefordshire, in Wales.

"[William] de Braiosa renders account of 800 marks and three 'dextrariis,' '5 chascour,' '21 senz and 10 leporariis,' for having in fee and inheritance to him and his heirs the castles of 'Grosso Monte, Skenefrid, and Lantelio,' with their appurtenances. He is to pay £100 a year.

The above four words, "dextrariis," &c., are said to mean light-horse, hunters, beagles (?) and greyhounds. See Cowel's 'Interpreter,' which refers to this very passage.

Close Roll, 6 John, m. 6. The King commands the Barons of the Exchequer that if William Brais' [Braiosa] has paid £50 for his son John, of the fine which he made with the King for £1000 for the widow of Hugh Bardolf and her land, they do receive £25 more from him and then acquit him of all the said fine, to wit, £1000 as if he had paid that sum, because his said son held the said land only for three quarters of a year. 26 March [1205.] His son John evidently died shortly after marrying the widow of Hugh Bardolf. (See next extract from Pipe Roll, 7 John, Warwick and Leicester). Amabil, who was the wife of Hugh Bard', renders account of 2000 marks and five palfreys that she be not distrained to marry and that she may be a widow so long as it shall please her; and if she should wish to marry she shall not do so without the consent of the King; and that she may be quit from suits of shires and hundreds and of sheriffs' aids as long as she shall be a widow after the death of John de Braiosa, formerly her husband, or as long as she shall be in the King's debt for the aforesaid fine, and that she may have that which she ought to have in wards and suits and other things which belong to her of the Barony of her father when they shall escheat. (£50 to be paid every quarter day till the whole be paid.) [1205-6.]

In this Pipe Roll are several entries relative to William de Braose same as in that of 5 John.

CHARTER ROLL, 10 JOHN, m. 1. Grant to Sylvester the King's chaplain of the church of Taccham, which is the King's gift because the land of the heir of David de Poher is come into the King's hands with the lands of William de Braosa, who had the custody of the same heir to hold for life 1 Decr [1208.]

CHARTER ROLL, 15 JOHN, m. 4. Grant to the Knights' Templars of the land of Niweland which W. de Braus' held of them to farm, and which was taken into the King's hand with the other land held by the same W. 8 June [1213.]

The above charter, 10 John, dated 1 Dec., gives about the exact date of the King's quarrel with William de Braose.

FAMILY AND PEDIGREE OF WRAY,

By the Rev. GEORGE OCTAVIUS WRAY, LL.D.,

FAMILY.

The publication of the first volume of Mr. Charles Dalton's interesting history of the 'Wrays of Glentworth' revives the still vexed question as to the ancestry of Sir Christopher Wray, C.J.

The late Mr. Clarkson, in his 'History of Richmond,' p. 256, describes Thomas, the father of Sir Christopher, as "of St. Nicholas"; and he gives four generations before Thomas as "of Richmond"; thus claiming the family as rooted in Richmond (at 30 years for a generation) since the middle of the fourteenth century. But there is not a jot of evidence given in support of all this.

The Rev. Canon Raine, in a note to the will of Johan Wieliff, in his 'Richmondshire Wills,' p. 156 (26 Surtees Soc. for 1853) and which note is quoted by Mr. Dalton, says that Thomas Wray, the father of Sir Christopher, and first husband of the testatrix, "had obtained a grant of the Hospital of St. Nicholas, near Richmond."

Now Johan Wieliff's will is dated 1562, Nov. 12, and in it she mentions two daughters, Merjorie Bowes and Johan Crosbie, who, as Canon Raine shows, were married by their maiden name of "Wycliffe." The testatrix also mentions a child of her daughter Bowes. We may conclude, therefore, that Thomas Wray died in or before the year 1540, at a comparatively early age.

It is clear then (with all due deference to so learned an authority), that Canon Raine is mistaken in saying that Thomas Wray had obtained a grant of St. Nicholas, for the original grant from the Crown was made in the 2nd Elizabeth, December 11th, to Robert Freke, that is, two years only before the date of Johan Wieliff's will.

Not only then does the statement that Thomas Wray had obtained the grant, but Mr. Clarkson's super-structure of four stories, fall to the ground.

Again, Mr. Dalton speaking of the Wensleydale family of Wrays says, (p. 2), "It is probable that this was a branch of the St. Nicholas family." The preceding remarks show this opinion to be erroneous; but it will now be shown that the facts are just the other way, and that the St. Nicholas branch was an off-shoot from the Wensleydale and Coverdale stock, which for shortness may be called the "Dales' Wrays."

In the sixteenth century these were a numerous clan, living in the parishes of Aysgarth, West Witton and Coverham, within a circuit of about two miles, of which the centre was in West Witton. This circuit comprised, within these parishes, the hamlet of Thoresby (commonly called Thursby), in the township of Carperby and parish of Aysgarth; it was then a large village, but was afterwards burnt down; the township of Thoraby in Aysgarth, in which is "Hestholm" aftermentioned; the hamlet of Swinithwaite in the parish of West Witton; and the township and village of Carlton in the parish of Coverham. These were all in the Royal Manor of Middleham, in which adjacent town some of the family lived.

Most of the Wrays were Crown-tenants of land held in the manor, and the wealthy members afterwards bought in fee large portions of these lands either direct from the Crown, or more frequently from the Citizens of London (commonly called "The Londoners,") to whom they had been granted by Charles I.

That this was the original settlement of the Wrays, and that they did not migrate hither from Richmond (a distance of twelve miles as the crow flies), appears from the Subsidy Rolls of 1543, (34 and 35 Hen. VIII, Hang West T. G. 11,527), in the Record Office, in which is only one Wray, namely Roger, mentioned as of Richmond, whereas of the "Dales' Wrays" nineteen are named, excluding, of course, women and children. But this will appear more clearly when we consider that the name is probably derived from "Ray-dale," a small valley tributary to Wensleydale, far away from Richmond.

Again, on Penhill (the watershed between Wensleydale and Coverdale), within a mile east of Penhill Beacon, close to the boundary between West Witton and Coverham parishes, is "Wray-keld-well," a name doubtless connected with the family. It is in the south-east corner of the Ordnance 6 inch sheet, No. 67.

It will be seen from the following proofs that Thomas, the father of Sir Christopher, was of this family. He was probably born at the end of the fifteenth century, and may therefore be the person named in the 'Valor Ecclesiasticus' of Hen. VIII, (vol. v, p. 243), as seneschal of Coverham Abbey. He died, as already suggested, about 1540, and accordingly his name is omitted in the Subsidy Rolls of 1543. Coverham Abbey afterwards came into the family.

Thomas Wray the elder was succeeded by his son Thomas, the first of the family, probably, who lived at St. Nicholas, and who is named in the Survey of 1553 of the manor of Middleham (in the Record Office) as tenant of land in "Carleton of Coverdeal"; and also in particulars of leases in the Augmentation Office (No. 188, Roll 32, No. 1) as lessee from the Crown in 1571 of a farm at Carlton. This may have been a renewal of the lease under which he was tenant in 1553. He was also grantee in 15th Elizabeth (1573) of land at Richmond (Palmer's Collection, M, No. 12).

But the identity of Thomas (the son) of Carlton, with him of St. Nicholas, is shown by documents in the possession of the family of the Wrays of Kelfield, descended from Richard, a son of Thomas the elder, and brother of Sir Christopher. From these it appears that a tenement in Coverdale, which previously belonged to Thomas of St. Nicholas, was in 1577 the property of John Wray, then of Brogden House, Kelfield. He was the son of Richard, above mentioned. This John, of Kelfield, moreover sold in 1566 and 1577 property in Carlton which had been formerly purchased by Thomas of St. Nicholas.

Seeing then that Thomas, the father of Sir Christopher, belonged originally to the 'Dales' Wrays,' we may look for his brothers in the same locality.

Reverting to the will of Johan Wieliff we find Adam Wray as a legatee. The presumption that he was the eldest brother of her first husband, and head of the family, amounts almost to a certainty when we bring the following wills and facts to bear. These are all Richmond Wills, originally kept under Trinity Church in that town, afterwards removed to Doctors' Commons, and now in Somerset House.

The first in importance is that of Adam Wray himself, whom Canon Raine correctly identified as the legatee of Johan Wieliff. He is described as of Thursbie, desires to be buried at Aysgarth, and devises his land and tenement at Thursbie, with the milne thereto belonging, to his son Sir Ralph; he mentions his "brethren Henry Chatter and George Wraic." This will is dated 1584, Nov. 30, attested by Christopher Wray, and was proved December 12 in the same year. Precedence in age is due to Adam before Thomas, as it is not likely that the oldest son would leave the home of the family.

Thursbie (Thoresby) is on the north side of the Yore, opposite to Hestholm, and to Swinithwaite, which lies to the west of West Witton.

Adam Wray appears in Instructions for Crown Lease 1571, May 18 (Roll 9, No. 10), as co-lessee with Christopher and Leonard Wray, of land which had been occupied by Stephen Wray. Their rents are equal, and there can be no doubt that Stephen was the father of Adam, Christopher, and Leonard, to whom the renewal was made equally.

Stephen was living in 1543 and 1546, as is shown by the Subsidy Rolls of those dates.

The will of Christopher Wray, in which he is described as of Swinithwaite, is dated 1584-5, February 16, three months after Adam's death.

In the Calendar of Richmond Wills is mentioned that of Leonard Wray of Swinithwaite, who may be the above named, but the will has not been found.

Adam Wray was the most influential, and therefore, most probably the head of the family, from the following facts:—he was, as already noted, remembered in the will of Johan Wielif; he was also a witness to the will of Edmund Wray of Aysgarth, 1565, January 12, as well as administration bondsman; witness to the will of William Wray of Thursbie, 1573, June 3; and administrator jointly with the widow to the estate of Roger Wray of Thursbie, 1574, September 27.

Adam Wray appears as a lessee of Crown-lands in West Witton, but not in Thoresby; the property therefore mentioned in his will must have been freehold. Some years ago burnt stones were found in ploughing on the site of this village, and also a mill-stone, which had doubtless belonged to Adam Wray's 'milne.' The tradition gives no date to the fire, but it may have led to the migration of the family to the other side of the river. Thoresby was not rebuilt.

It will be seen from the following pedigree that the wealth which Adam doubtless possessed devolved in the line traced below. Outside of this line the name has entirely disappeared from the circuit above described, with one or two exceptions in humble station. This alone affords a strong presumption in favour of the descent of the 'Dales' Wrays' from Adam Wray.

Now as to the Wrays who remained on the spot, it is to be observed, that in the Manor Survey of 1553, Ralph Wray is named as a tenant of land at Middleham at 15s. 1d.; and that in the Inrolments of Leases of 13th Elizabeth (1571) Yorks: Roll 18, No. 2, is a demise to John Wray at 15s. rent of land at Middleham, formerly in the occupation of Ralph Wray; shewing that John was the son of Ralph. No other Ralph appears on record, and it may therefore be presumed that he was the only son of Adam, being sole devisee under his father's will. From this will it appears that Ralph was in holy orders, and he may have resided at Middleham in connection with the Collegiate Church there.

But the land in the lease last mentioned is in 1610 (Roll 39, No. 32) described as formerly let to John Wray, but is then let to John Skarr; from which it seems probable that John Wray had (if he ever lived there) left Middleham, and then resided on his property at Thoresby, or at Hestholm. Upon his death he was succeeded by his son John, as we find from the will of Henry Wray of Thursbie, 1637, December 2, devising property which he "bought of John Wray the younger of Thursbie." It does not appear whether John the father, or John the son, first occupied Hestholm as crown-lessee. John the son subsequently purchased it "of the Londoners"; (see evidence in Wray v. Pepper, Chancery Proceedings, George I and II, Rolls 1208, 2675, 2777), but the conveyance was made to his son George 1657, November 30.

In a crown lease 1609, January 29 (Augmentation Office Inrollments of Leases, Roll 39, No. 34), James Wray is lessee of land of which John Wray had been tenant under lease of 31 Elizabeth (1589) November 26; therefore, James was the son of John the younger.

It is certainly proved by the evidence in the suit of Wray v. Pepper, that James and George were the sons of John Wray of Hestholm; so that the identity of these Johns is clear.

The intimate relationship between the Wrays of Hestholm, Middleham, and Coverham, is shown by the fact that the above-named George, the son of John the younger, was the owner of Coverham Abbey and Thoraby Town-head, and afterwards lived and died at Middleham. From him the present owner by inheritance of Hestholm, and other property originally purchased by John and George Wray last mentioned, and the other members now living of the family of Dales' Wrays, forty-five in number, are directly and certainly descended. These are the grand-children and great grand-children of George Wray of Thoraby-Townhead, who died in 1806 as stated in the following pedigree.

We have not yet, therefore, in all human probability, seen "The last of the Wrays," of whom Mr. Dalton promises to publish the memoirs.

PEDIGREE.

Stephen Wray, lessee from the Crown of land at West Witton, living 1543-1546. Issue:

1. Adam Wray of Thursbie. Will 1584, November 30. Died 1584.
2. Christopher Wray of Swinithwaite. Will 1584-5, Feb. 16. Died same year. Widow Elizabeth.
3. Leonard Wray.
4. Thomas Wray, seneschal 1535 of Coverham Abbey. Married Johan Jackson, who wedded 2ndly John Wielif. Thomas and Johan Wray left issue:
 - i. Thomas Wray of St. Nicholas, from whom the Beamish branch. (See 2 Surtees' Durham, 226.)
 - ii. Leonard Wray, from whom the Cusworth branch. (See Hunter's Deutery of Doncaster, 349.)
 - iii. Sir Christopher Wray, Knight, Chief Justice, from whom the Glentworth branch. (See Dalton's History of the Wrays of Glentworth.)
 - iv. Richard, from whom the Kelfield branch.

Adam Wray had issue one son and three daughters:

1. Sir Ralph Wray, devisee under his father's will.

1. Dorothy.
2. Elizabeth.
3. Catherine.

Ralph Wray, in Priest's orders, crown-tenant in 1553 of land in Middleham, left issue :

1. John Wray, crown-lessee in 1571 of land at Middleham, late of his father Ralph.

John Wray had issue :

1. John Wray the younger of Thoresby, afterwards of Hestholm.

John Wray the younger married 1615, December 19, at West Witton, Sisselle Wynne, and is described as of "Hestholme" in a conveyance to him in 18 James I (1621), January 11, of land which is still in the family. John Wray the younger and Sisselle his wife had issue :

1. James Wray of Hestholm and Edgley in the parish of Aysgarth : left an only child Cicely, who married (1) Miles Hardeastle, (2) ... Hagggett, (3) John Pepper, party to the suit of Wray v. Pepper. She died without issue.
2. George Wray, who succeeded to the property of his father and brother.
 1. Ann, married John Hammond.
 2. Elizabeth, married George Dodsworth. She died 1702, August 26.

George Wray married 1668, May, Sarah Dobson, who died 1706, April 7. He is described as of Thoraby in deeds, 1651, October 24, and 1657, November 30, the latter being a conveyance to him of (inter alia) Hestholm from John Elmsworth, who had on the previous July 3 bought it from the citizens of London. He also, 1665, December 30, purchased Thoraby Townhead from the citizens of London; and in or about 1674 he bought Coverham Abbey. He describes himself in a family register, begun by him and continued by his sons, as of Coverham Abbey. In his will, 1718, June 9, he is described as of "Middleham, gentleman." He died 1719, August 1, aged 92, leaving issue :

1. John Wray his heir.
2. George Wray of Coverham, who married Dorothy Topham, and died without male issue. Through his daughter Dorothy, who married Robert Atkinson, Coverham Abbey descended to her son Wray Atkinson.

John Wray, by deed, 1703, December 20, settled part of his estate on George his son and heir. He died 1714, February 14. His only child was :

1. George Wray, as next below :

George Wray, 1703, January 1, married Grace —. In his will, 1737, November 28, he is described as of Thorally; by it he gave Hestholm to his younger son Jonathan, and his residuary estate to his elder son George. George and Grace Wray left issue :

1. George Wray, who left no issue.
 2. Jonathan Wray, whose two sons succeeded to the property.
- 1—6. Six daughters.

George Wray, devisee of Thorally Townhead and Dale-Foot, married Jane Hogg. By his will he gives Dale-Foot to his wife Jane for life, with remainder to his nephew Jonathan; and his lands at Thorally to his nephew George. He died 1785, Jan. 14, aged 78. His widow died 1788, April 16, aged 80. George and Jane Wray died without issue. His brother, as next below, survived him.

Jonathan Wray married 1756, March 5, Mary Taylor of Carperby, to whom by will 1780, January 17, he gave one third of his real estate for life; to his son George he gave Hestholm, and to his son Jonathan his other property. He died 1780, January 20. His widow was buried 1803, December 1. Jonathan and Mary Wray had issue :

1. George Wray, from whom are the present family, as traced below. By a family arrangement Hestholm was made over by George to his brother.
2. Jonathan, of Hestholm, baptized 1759, December 29. Married 1789, September 30, to Agnes Robinson, of Crosby Garrett. Buried 1811, August 4. His widow died 1843, aged 83. They had an only child :
 - i. William Robinson Wray, of Hestholm, baptized 1790, October 19; buried 1861, May 8. Dying intestate and a bachelor, Hestholm and other property in Yorkshire and Westmoreland went to the heir still living, of his father's elder brother, namely,

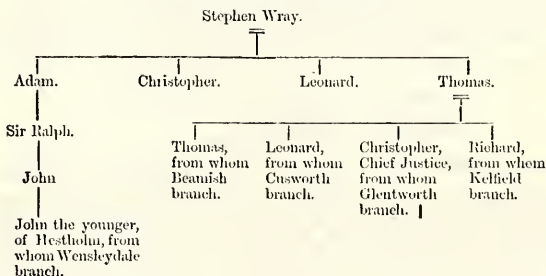

George Wray, of Thorally Townhead, baptized 1757, February 6; married 1784, May 20, Ann Fawcet, "The Queen-bee of Swaledale," being heiress of Thomas Fawcet, of Marrick, to whom, for four successive years (1762 to 1765), the Gold Medal of the Society of Arts was awarded "For erecting Bee-hives," (see 1 Dossie's 'Memoirs of Agriculture,' 1768). George Wray of Thorally Town-head survived his wife, and died 1806, October 14.

The following brass under the east, or memorial window, of the Wray chapel, in Aysgarth church, brings the pedigree down from George and Ann Wray to the living members of the family:—

"To the memory of George Wray, of Thorally TownHead, in “ this parish, esquire, who died 14 October 1806, aged 50, and

Notices of Books.

THE HUNDRED OF LAUNDITCH AND DEANERY OF BRISLEY. By G. A. CARTHEW, F.S.A. Part III. Norwich: Miller and Leavins, 1879. 4to.

We congratulate Mr. Carthew on the completion of the concluding part of his very valuable book, and those subscribers, alas, too few! who are fortunate enough to possess it at the exceedingly small price at which they have obtained it, a price so far below that for which it ought to have been published that they should regard it almost in the light of a gift from the author. No copies, we are informed by the publishers, remain for sale. The future value of the work will therefore be very high. Mr. Carthew pays a just tribute to the labours of Francis Blomefield, his great accuracy, and unwearied industry; the impartial reader will feel that he owes as much and more to Mr. Carthew, whose modest estimate of his own labours lends a continual charm to his book. The contents of this part are in no degree inferior in interest to those of the other two. It teems with extracts from parish registers, monumental inscriptions, and pedigrees of great use to the genealogist.

The number of quaint epitaphs is not great. A family named Greengrass seems to have had a taste for them, as well as for singular names, such as Alpheg', Alethea, and Hegesias. On a stone at Dunham Magna in memory of Elizabeth Greengrass:—

“My saviour fell a sacrifice in his prime aged 33

I leave this world in my prime the same age as he.”

William Greengrass was a great student, and according to his epitaph “wrote his own nativity, and predicted the time he was to die.”

Ambrose Pinlowe, Rector, performed a runaway marriage, and having discovered his mistake has entered a curious recantation, “resolving to be wise hereafter,” in the Dunham Register (p. 86).

At page 258 is a singular account of a baptismal feast, the quantity of the viands being far more than the half dozen people apparently present could have required.

The notes “of all such things as are belonging to our church of Beeston, 1606,” from the register there, entered by the Rev. Mr. Forby, Rector, are well worth looking through. An entry in Beeston Register says that the word Beldam means a great-great-grandmother (abavia), a definition which agrees neither with the Promptorium Parvulorum nor with that given by Halliwell.

Among the many elaborate and original pedigrees given by Mr. Carthew, that of the immortal Nelson cannot fail to interest the reader. Several of them illustrate those given in Le Neve's “Knights,” to which we have made some additions in these pages.

The account of the parish of Elmham, the seat of the East Anglian Bishopric in Saxon times, and the popular traditions connected with it, which Mr. Carthew takes pains to confute, is one of the most attractive chapters in his book. The fine church was unfortunately, a few years since, delivered to the spoiler for restoration, and he made a clean sweep of it. “I can scarcely detail with patience what has been lost” is our author's observation. The same, alas! applies to nearly every church in the United Kingdom. In a few years an un-restored church will be a rarity of as much interest to the antiquary as Stonehenge or the Pyramids are now. The family history of the Cokes, under this parish, from Sir Edward to his descendant in the female line, "Coke of Norfolk," is carefully and elaborately worked out.

We have said enough to show the extensive range of material of which the 'History of Launditch' is composed, and close the volume with our best thanks to its author for allowing us to reap the fruits of his labour, and with much regret that his advancing years forbid us to hope that he will add another volume of Norfolk history to those now brought to an end. That health and rest may be the reward of his labour is our hearty good wish.

OUR ANCIENT MONUMENTS AND THE LAND AROUND THEM. By C. P. KAINS-JACKSON. With a preface by Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart., F.R.S., M.P. London: Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster Row, 1880. 4to.

Mr. Kains-Jackson in this book gives a very interesting account of the various antiquities scheduled in the Ancient Monuments' Bill, and Sir John Lubbock has written an admirable preface, which in a concise manner gives us a very clear idea of what constitutes an ancient monument deemed worthy of legislative protection, and the historic period to which it belongs. This work deals with Tumuli, Megalithic Monuments, and Fortifications and Ruined Dwellings. These are, alas! rapidly disappearing in our utilitarian age. Surprise has been frequently expressed that the Ancient Monuments' Bill has been confined to promoting the preservation of these, to the exclusion of mediæval works of art. This is owing to the fact that, on the ground of expense, it would be necessary to deal with the latter in a different manner. We must not ask an unwilling legislature for too much at once. When Sir John has driven in the thin edge of the wedge we have no doubt but that public opinion will enable him to drive it up to the thick. We hope it will not come too late to preserve the monuments of our historic, as well as our pre-historic ancestors.

Pre-historic archaeology may be divided into four great epochs. The Drift, when man shared Europe with the mammoth and other extinct animals. The Stone Age, when stone was used for weapons and implements. The Bronze Age, when bronze was used for such purposes. The Iron Age, when that metal had superseded bronze, and in which we are still living. Silver, lead, zinc, were discovered, letters invented in, and at the dawn of History we find Europe already in the Iron Age. None of the monuments scheduled in Sir John Lubbock's Bill can be referred to the first period. There can, however, be no doubt that many of our Tumuli belong to the second, which Sir John calls the "Neolithic" Age, though some are as recent as Saxon times. Of Tumuli, Menhirs, Dolmens, Stone Circles, Rows or Avenues, the great majority were Tombs. Some were memorial monuments, some were temples, but the idea and plan of all is that of an interment. Even now the northern races of men live in houses formed on the model of those tombs. The Arctic races still construct a subterranean chamber, over which they pile earth for the sake of warmth. Tumuli exactly resembling these modern houses have been found, as at Godhavn, in Sweden, in 1830, where the dead were found sitting round, each with his implements, in the very seats which doubtless they had often occupied when alive. Thus the house became a tomb, the tomb again a temple, for the Khasias, a primitive people of India, even now construct megalithic monuments over the dead.

There is no lack of record of the erection of Menhirs in our Sacred writings; Jacob set up three, the last being a monument to Rachel, enough surely to entitle him to be the patron saint of the monument makers whose shops disfigure the approaches to our modern cemeteries. Mr. Kains-Jackson's descriptions of our ancient monuments are written in a popular and amusing form, and are nicely illustrated. They will serve as a guide to those whose summer ramble extends to the bare plains where they can be seen, as well as to instruct those whose misfortune it may be to stay at home.

CURIOSITIES OF THE SEARCH ROOM, A COLLECTION OF SERIOUS AND WILMISICAL WILLS. By the Author of 'Flemish Interiors,' &c. London: Chapman and Hall, 1880. 8vo.

The authoress, we speak advisedly, of this amusing book, for few of the wills contained in it are vouched for as of authority, and may therefore be, for aught we know, the invention of her own romantic fancy, has aimed at pleasing the curiosity of the vulgar by collecting a number of singular testamentary dispositions, and arranging their contents in a popular form. The publisher, the printer, and the binder, have all done their work well, and it is no fault of theirs if the book fails to captivate the wonder-wanting public. The title is well chosen, apt to attract the eye of the antiquary, and to goad the genealogist into thinking of new curiosities in store for him. When they have perused it, should the sickness consequent on hope deferred be their portion, the publisher, the printer, and the binder, must not be blamed.

We gather from the preface that the term "Search Room" means that department of Her Majesty's High Court of Justice, Probate Division, where the wills of persons proved in the Principal Registry may be inspected for the fee of one shilling. Our readers will possibly be surprised to learn that this preface bears strong internal evidence that the writer of the book has never been inside this Search Room. No person accustomed to frequent it would have written such a description of the room, or made statements so at variance with facts, as to the amount of the information, e.g., name and description of testator, date of will, and date of probate, &c., which every searcher is permitted to note. The writer apparently never heard of the "Literary Department," in which permission is given in the most liberal manner to peruse and copy any will previous to the year 1761.

This volume contains wills, or abstracts of wills, from that of Sennacherib to that of the murderer Peace, most of them entirely devoid of interest, some evidently imaginary, others repeated twice over like that of Henry Trigg (pp. 122, 125), and all without the date of probate and court in which they were proved, so that it is impossible for the genealogist to determine whether they are genuine documents or only the result of the creative fancy of the compiler. The book has the merit of being amusing, it may serve to while away a leisure hour, but it is not instructive, or of any value to the antiquary

A TREATYSE OF FYSSHYNGE WYTH AN ANGLE. By DAME JULIANA BERNERS. (Fac-simile reproduction). With Introduction by Rev. M. G. WATKINS, M.A. Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster Row, 1880. 4to.

The chief interest to the genealogist in this father of fishing-books lies in the fact that it was first published as a portion of the second edition of the Book of St. Albans, and, like hunting, hawking and coat-armour, deals with a subject considered in the days of our ancestors as one of the "playsaunt matters belongynge vnto noblesse." These matters were in former times, and we are not unwilling to suppose are now by some people, considered as a necessary part of the education, and a knowledge of them as the exclusive possession, of "gentyll and noble men." The worthy authoress added this treatise to the Book of St. Albans in order that it should not come to "the hondys of eche ydle persone whyche wolde desire it yf it were empynted allone" to the intent that the afore-said idle persons should not destroy the dysporte of fysshynge, or, as we should put it now, should not be turned into poachers by the aid of popular literature.

Fish and fishing tackle have from the earliest times been common devices in the field of heraldry, and furnish us with many an amusing canting coat, as Lucey, Salmon, Herring, and Roach. It is singular that Moule, the learned author of the 'Heraldry of Fish,' should have omitted to even mention this book.

This fac-simile is reproduced from a copy of the original edition in the British Museum by means of photography, and consequently there can be no doubt that we have a faithful detail before us. Mr. Elliott Stock has apparently spared neither pains nor expense in its production, and deserves the thanks of admirers of early typography, a kind of art which he appears destined to make popular.

We learn with much satisfaction that this book is shortly to be followed by a similar reproduction of the Book of St. Albans, about which we shall have more to say hereafter.

APPENDIX TO THE HISTORY OF THE WRAYS OF GLENTWORTH. By CHARLES DALTON, F.R.G.S. Chapman and Hall, 1880.

At the request of several people interested in his 'History of the Wrays,' Mr. Dalton has issued an Appendix and Index to the first volume, pending the publication of vol. ii. In it he gives the wills of Sir Christopher and others, with grants of arms, and extracts from parish registers. This addition to his book was much needed, and he has done wisely in printing it before the issue of the second volume.
